Dingidentitäten und Objekttransformationen. Einige Überlegungen zur Edition von archäologischen Funden

Zusammenfassung

Editionen – eine spezifische Gattung der Wissenschaftsliteratur – spielen nicht nur in der Philologie, sondern als umfangreiche Materialpublikationen auch in der Archäologie eine zentrale Rolle. Ihre Bedeutung für die archäologische Wissensgenerierung wurde zwar immer wieder betont, aber bisher nicht systematisch untersucht. Ziel dieses Beitrages ist die Analyse der praxeologischen Verknüpfung von Welt und Abbild beim Editieren archäologischer Quellen mit Hilfe von Latours Konzept der „zirkulierenden Referenz“. Beispielhaft wird diese Übersetzungsarbeit anhand einer im Rahmen des Forschungs- und Editionsprojektes der Prähistorischen Bronzefunde editierten Nadel nachvollzogen. Dabei wird auf Dingidentitäten, Objekttransformationen und (De-)Punktualisierungen sowie den Unterschied von Quellen und Daten im Zuge des Edierens und Kartierens archäologischer (Be-)Funde eingegangen.

Keywords: Edition; zirkulierende Referenz; Übersetzen; Dinge; Objekte; Transformation; Punktualisierung; Prähistorische Archäologie; Bronzefunde

Editions – a specific genre of scientific literature – play a central role not only in philology, but also in archaeology as comprehensive publications of material. Their importance for archaeological knowledge production has been emphasized repeatedly, but so far not systematically investigated. The aim of this contribution is to analyse the praxeological connection of the world and its representations in the editing of archaeological sources by employing Latour's concept of the "circulating reference". This work of translation is traced using as an example a needle that was published as part of the research and edition project Prähistorische Bronzefunde. Thus the paper deals with thing identities, object transformations and (de-)punctualisation, as well as the difference between sources and data in the course of editing and mapping of archaeological finds and features.

Keywords: edition; circulating reference; translation; things; objects; transformation; punctualisation; prehistoric archaeology; bronze finds
