novels considered here much of the inner discourse is performed. The female protagonist understands that she is expected to act out the accepted feminine role. As a consequence the inner self expresses itself through the conscious manipulation of the image. For this reason Professor Hovet argues that tableaux vivants provide an apt central metaphor for the development of female identity in these novels. These living pictures consist of individuals usually women carefully costumed and posed to replicate famous scenes from history and the arts. In the nineteenth century these tableaux evolved in the United States into an extremely popular parlor game or entertainment interlude in middle class social gatherings. In the novels Lily Barts' portrayal of Joshua Reynold's Mrs Lloyd in Edith Wharton's The House of Mirth provides the most vivid example. But the novels also make it clear that tableaux vivants were a part of everyday life as young women learned to pose before others as the model of feminine beauty or as the angel in the house. This study adds to those of Susan Fraiman, Lori Merish and Nancy Armstrong that describe the relationship of novels to the development of middle class subjectivity. In particular it explains the process by which a female subjectivity evolved in the United States from the mid nineteenth to late twentieth century. Employing a historical continuum Professor Hovet selected for study novels that she saw as most influential in the culture of the United States because of their ongoing popularity and continued presence in the culture. Literary historians consider Susan Warner's The Wide Wide World 1850 to be America's first best seller. Little Women 1869 has been one of the most read and loved novels at least among young female readers for more than a century and has been made into at least four well known movies with stars the caliber of Katherine Hepburn and Winona Ryder. Harriet Beecher Stowe's My Wife and I 1871 was hugely successful in an intensely competitive serial fiction market. Kate Chopin's The Awakening 1899 has become a mainstay in literature and women's studies classrooms and has been made into at least two movies. End of August and Grand Isle Edith Wharton's The House of Mirth 1905 was not only popular among middle class readers of the time but has become known to mass culture through the 2000 movie version. Margaret Mitchell's Gone with the Wind 1936 and its movie version generated the term blockbuster. Harper Lee's To Kill a Mockingbird has been one of the most widely read books of the twentieth century and the movie starring Gregory Peck is now a cultural icon. Marilyn French's The Women's Room 1977 remains a cause celebre and Mona Simpson's Anywhere But Here 1986 was reprinted six times within two months of its publication and became a movie starring Susan Sarandon. The study also tries to show how depictions of female identity surfaced tensions and anxieties in the dominant social discourse. All the novels in this analysis are so called crossover novels. The term crossover has become common in culture studies particularly in analyses of the way some works reach a large enough audience to breach the walls that t
