

Summary of selected differences between the FIDE Laws of Chess and the US Chess Official Rules of Chess, 6th edition

Last updated: November 13, 2017 by Mike Hoffbauer, US Chess National Tournament Director and FIDE Arbiter. This document was compiled from multiple sources, including similar documents prepared by NTD and IA Ken Ballou.

Here is a brief summary of differences between the FIDE Laws of Chess and the US Chess Official Rules of Chess. This is not meant to be a comprehensive list but rather a "top ten" list of important differences (more likely to arise in practice) and more obscure differences.

1. Chess Terms

a. Referee: The term "Tournament Director" used in US Chess is called the "Arbiter" in FIDE.

b. Time Control and how Games are Rated: Both the FIDE Laws of Chess and the US Chess Official Rules of Chess have different rules based on the time control for the game. In both systems the "total time" for each player is based on the base time control, plus time added due to the use of time delay or time increment over the course of a 60-move game. For example, in a time control of G/60, d/5, the "total time" for each player is 60 minutes, plus 300 seconds (e.g. 5 minutes, determined by 60 moves times 5 seconds of delay per move) ... for a total of 65 minutes. Similarly, for a Blitz game with a time control of G/5, d/2, the total game time is 7 minutes (e.g. 5 minutes plus 60x2 seconds).

Time Controls in FIDE and US Chess – Total Time is based on a 60-move game
FIDE – Total time for each player	US Chess – Total time for each player
"Standard" Game: 60 minutes or more	"Regular" Game: 30 minutes or more
"Rapid Play" Game: more than 10 minutes, but less than 60 minutes	"Quick" Game: more than 10 minutes, but less than 30 minutes
Blitz Game: 10 minutes or less	Blitz Game: 5 or more minutes, up to 10 minutes

2. Rules Differences: The following table calls attention to selected and significant differences between US Chess regular rules and FIDE standard rules.

	Topic	What FIDE says ...	What US Chess says ...
0	Pairings against Siblings, Relatives, Friends or Club-mates	FIDE does not allow players to request that they not be paired against each other.	US Chess Rule 28T allows players to request that they not be paired against each other.
1	Chess Notation Recording your Moves	You must always write-down your move after you make it. Electronic Notation devices are not allowed unless they are specified in pre-tournament announcements. Scoresheets shall be visible to the Arbiters at all times.	You write-down your move after you make it, especially when using a US Chess-approved electronic notation device. Players using paper scoresheets may write-down their move first unless the rules for the event specify otherwise. Scoresheets must be visible to the TDs at all times.
2	Recording your Move When can you stop taking chess notation??	You must continue recording moves if you have at least 5 minutes on your clock, even if your opponent has less than 5 minutes remaining. If the time control has an increment of at least 30 seconds per move , then both players are required to record their moves at all times .	Both players may stop recording moves for the rest of the time control if either player has less than 5 minutes remaining .
3	Calling the Flag down	The Arbiter can call fallen flags without a claim by the player or the opponent.	Only the players may call a fallen flag.
