Pelc, 2016-09-08 All treaties from human rights to international trade include formal exceptions that allow governments to legally break the rules that they have committed to in order to deal with unexpected events Such institutional flexibility is necessary yet it raises a tricky theoretical question how to allow for this necessary flexibility while preventing its abuse Krzysztof J Pelc examines how designers of rules in vastly different settings come upon similar solutions to render treaties resistant to unexpected events Essential for undergraduate students graduate students and scholars in political science economics and law the book provides a comprehensive account of the politics of treaty flexibility Drawing on a wide range of evidence its multi disciplinary approach addresses the paradoxes inherent in making and bending international rules

The Predator Paradox John A. Shivik, 2015-04-14 An expert in wildlife management tells the stories of those who are finding new ways for humans and mammalian predators to coexist Stories of backyard bears and cat eating coyotes are becoming increasingly common even for people living in non rural areas Farmers anxious to protect their sheep from wolves aren't the only ones concerned suburbanites and city dwellers are also having more unwanted run ins with mammalian predators And that might not be a bad thing After all our government has been at war with wildlife since 1914 and the death toll has been tremendous federal agents kill a combined ninety thousand wolves bears coyotes and cougars every year often with dubious biological effectiveness Only recently have these species begun to recover Given improved scientific understanding and methods can we continue to slow the slaughter and allow populations of mammalian predators to resume their positions as keystone species As carnivore populations increase however their proximity to people pets and livestock leads to more conflict and we are once again left to negotiate the uneasy terrain between elimination and conservation In The Predator Paradox veteran wildlife management expert John Shivik argues that we can end the war while still preserving and protecting these key species as fundamental components of healthy ecosystems By reducing almost sole reliance on broad scale death from above tactics and by incorporating nonlethal approaches to managing wildlife from electrified flagging to motion sensor lights we can dismantle the paradox have both people and predators on the landscape and ensure the long term survival of both As the boundary between human and animal habitat blurs preventing human wildlife conflict depends as much on changing animal behavior as on changing our own perceptions attitudes and actions To that end Shivik focuses on the facts mollifies fears and presents a variety of tools and tactics for consideration Blending the science of the wild with entertaining and dramatic storytelling Shivik's clear eyed pragmatism allows him to appeal to both sides of the debate while arguing for the possibility of coexistence between ranchers and environmentalists wildlife managers and animal welfare activists and humans and animals

The Ecology and Evolution of Inducible Defenses Ralph Tollrian, C. Drew Harvell, 2021-04-13 Inducible defenses those often dramatic phenotypic shifts in prey activated by biological agents ranging from predators to pathogens are widespread in the natural world Yet research on the inducible defenses used by vertebrates invertebrates and plants in terrestrial marine and freshwater habitats has largely developed along independent lines Ralph Tollrian and Drew Harvell seek to change that here By bringing together leading researchers from all fields to review common themes and explore emerging ideas this book represents the most current and comprehensive survey of knowledge about the ecology and evolution of inducible defenses Contributors examine organisms as different as unicellular algae and higher vertebrates and consider defenses ranging from immune systems to protective changes in morphology behavior chemistry and life history The authors of the review chapters case studies and theoretical studies pinpoint unifying factors favoring the evolution of inducible defenses Throughout the volume emphasizes a multidisciplinary approach integrating applied and theoretical ecology evolution genetics and chemistry In addition Harvell and Tollrian provide an introduction and a conclusion that review the current state of knowledge in the field and identify areas for future research The contributors in addition to the editors are May Berenbaum Arthur Zangerl Johannes J remo Juha Tuomi Patric Nilsson Anurag Agrawal Richard Karban Marcel Dicke Ellen Van Donk Miquel L rling Winfried Lampert Simon Frost John Gilbert Hans Werner Kuhlmann J rgen Kusch Klaus Heckmann Luc De Meester Piotr Dawidowicz Erik van Gool Carsten Loose Stanley Dodson Christer Br nmark Lars Pettersson Anders Nilsson Bradley Anholt Earl Werner Curtis Lively Frederick Adler Daniel Gr nbaum and Wilfried Gabriel
