Major Depressive Disorder Bernhard T. Baune,2021-08-26 Major Depressive Disorder MDD is a clinically and neurobiologically highly heterogenous mood disorder that consists of a variety of symptom clusters including mood symptoms physical symptoms and cognitive symptoms While the traditional model of depression implicates mood as the primary symptom cluster a more recently published conceptual understanding of depression has extended to also include cognitive symptoms Moreover the understanding of the central role of cognitive processes in emotion processing social interaction and pure cognitive performance has led to a model suggestion that places cognitive processing central to the pathophysiology of depression Cognitive dimensions of depression have long been implicated in the nature of depression that are characterised typically by impaired cognitive and emotional processes In the following volume the dimensions of cognitive function emotion processing and social cognitive processing are highlighted to comprehensively describe large parts of the clinical symptoms as well as the pathophysiology and biology of the brain based disorder of depression The focus on the above cognitive and emotional dimensions of depression offers extended and novel diagnostic and treatment approaches ranging from pharmacological to psychological interventions targeting those dimensions of depression This volume informs about some of the more fundamental psychological biological and clinical concepts that are applicable to the comprehensive treatment of depression and is suitable for students trainees clinicians and scientists in the fields of psychology neuropsychology psychiatry cognitive neuroscience neurology general medicine general practice and other health care professionals as it will also cover core knowledge and skills for training as well as practice Treatment Works American Psychiatric Association,2000 This patient and family guide to major depressive disorder covers topics such as what is depression what are the signs and symptoms of depression who gets depression what causes depression and how is depression treated
