Geomorphology of Desert Environments Anthony J. Parsons, A. D. Abrahams, 2009-03-20 About one third of the Earth's land surface experiences a desert climate and this area supports approximately 15% of the planet's population This percentage continues to grow and with this growth comes the need to acquire and apply an understanding of desert geomorphology Such an understanding is vital in managing scarce and fragile resources and in mitigating natural hazards

This authoritative reference book is comprehensive in its coverage of the geomorphology of desert environments and is arranged thematically. It begins with an overview of global deserts, proceeds through treatments of weathering, hillslopes, rivers, piedmonts, lake basins, and aeolian surfaces, and concludes with a discussion of the role of climatic change. Written by a team of international authors, all of whom are active in the field, the chapters cover the spectrum of desert geomorphology.

Desert Biology G. W. Brown, 2013-09-17. Desert Biology Special Topics on the Physical and Biological Aspects of Arid Regions. Volume II records the conditions and life in the arid regions of the world. This book discusses the hydrogeology of arid regions, desert soil surfaces, and classes and physical and vegetational aspects of the Sahara Desert. The Piman Indians of the Sonoran Desert approach to the water relations of desert plants, desert arthropods, and aquatic environments of deserts are also considered. Other topics include the artificial changes in the hydrogeology of deserts, soils of individual world deserts, rainfall and water supply of desert plants, and ecological plant types in arid regions. The hydration in true xerophytes, chloride accumulation in halophytes, and biological response to desert water conditions are likewise covered in this publication. This volume is recommended for researchers and specialists interested in the hot, dry regions of the planet.

Climate Change in Deserts Martin Williams, 2014-08-11. A synthesis of the environmental and climatic history of every major desert and desert margin for researchers and advanced students.

Lost, a Desert River and Its Native Fishes Gordon Mueller, Paul C. Marsh, 2002. The Colorado River had one of the most unique fish communities in the world. Seventy-five percent of those species were found nowhere else in the world. Settlement of the lower basin brought dramatic change to both the river and its native fish. Those changes began more than 120 years ago as settlers began stocking nonnative fishes. By 1930, nonnative fish had spread throughout the lower basin and replaced native communities. All resemblance of historic river conditions faded with the construction of Hoover Dam in 1935 and other large water development projects. Today few remember what the Colorado River was really like. Seven of the nine mainstream fishes are now Federally protected as endangered. Federal and state agencies are attempting to recover these fish. However, progress has been frustrated due to the severity of human impact. This report represents testimony, old descriptions, and photographs describing the changes that have taken place, in hopes that it will provide managers, biologists, and the interested public a better appreciation of the environment that shaped these unique fish.

Deserts and Desert Environments Julie J. Laity, 2009-01-28. Taking a global perspective, this book provides a concise overview of drylands, including their physical, biological, temporal, and human components. Examines the physical systems occurring in desert environments, including climate, hydrology, past and present lakes, weathering, hillslopes, geomorphic surfaces, water as a geomorphic agent, and aeolian processes. Offers an accessible introduction to the physical, biological, temporal, and human components of drylands. Investigates the nature, environmental requirements, and essential geomorphic roles of plants and animals in this
