Gaimday

This play is considered cross-ice as the leading player carries the puck into the offensive zone.

Passing the puck to a teammate already in the offensive zone will result in an offside violation.
