Rube, C. H. William, 1915-
Saigon Medical School.

Dr. Tam was less interested in having a large number of American teaching faculty in Saigon than he was in training members of his faculty in the U.S. for graduate degrees.

In the course of their AMA project, the Saigon department continued to grow in strength under the direction of Dr. Tam and with the support of Dr. Rubegeau. This continuing development was in no small part due to Dr. Tam's personal goals, his objectives for the medical school, and his interests and knowledge of biochemistry in the American mold. The way they have accounted for his perception that there was no need to additional American faculty into the Saigon department.

The chairman of the Vietnamese department, Bui Duy Tam, MD, PhD, was a remarkable individual who had completed his medical degree in Saigon and had earned a doctorate in biochemistry at the University of California at Berkeley. He had a thorough understanding of basic science education in the U.S. and had set as his goal the development of a biochemistry department similar to that in a small American medical school. In addition, Dr. Tam was well versed in classical Vietnamese culture and music and understood the need to adapt tradition to modern methods.* As Dean of the Hue Medical School, he had been instrumental in moving the operation of that school to Saigon when Hue was occupied temporarily by the North Vietnamese. Later Dr. Tam was primarily responsible for founding the private medical college at Minh Duc University in Saigon.

Dr. Quyen was apprehended and placed under house arrest in Saigon in late 1967, presumably because he opposed the policies of the government. He was replaced by Bui Duy Tam, MD, who was appointed Dean in December 1967. Dr. Tam was also Chairman of the Department of Biochemistry in the Faculty of Medicine, University of Saigon, and subsequently became the organizer and Dean of a medical school in the private Minh Duc University. Following the Tet offensive in January 1968, when more than 2,000 people were assassinated in Hue, many of them faculty at the university, Dr. Tam moved the entire medical student body and the majority of the remainder of the medical faculty to Saigon and re-established a teaching program in a surprisingly short time. The Faculty of Medicine of the University of Saigon made its basic science laboratories, library, and cafeteria available. The Military Medical School provided classroom space. The Faculties of Pharmacy and Science provided teaching staff, and clinical teaching was continued at Cong Hoa Hospital and Grall Hospital (a private French hospital). The circumstances of the Hue Faculty of Medicine had altered greatly and the AMA recommended to USAID that support be given to the school.

Thereafter, the AMA gave assistance in many ways. The school returned to Hue after six months in Saigon. Books and English-language teaching were provided by the AMA staff. Many of the basic science and clinical departments provided faculty assistance through short visits to Hue.

By the end of the AMA's time in Viet Nam, the University of Hue had a vigorous school of medicine with a majority of young faculty providing excellent instruction to approximately 60 students in each class. In many ways, the school at Hue seemed likely to surpass the school at Saigon in moving forward with modern techniques of medical education. This was due partly to the presence of a young and vigorous faculty in Hue and partly to the lack of resistance to change by traditional, entrenched faculty and political structures. The faculty at Hue accepted much more quickly and completely the recommendations of the Colloquium and the Seminar than did the faculty at Saigon.

Bui Duy Tam, MD, was replaced as Dean of the University of Hue Medical School soon after he had returned the school to Hue. While he continued to teach biochemistry in Hue and maintained a strong interest in the school, he devoted much of his boundless energy to developing a new private medical school at Minh Duc University. Buildings were secured and outfitted as classrooms and laboratories. A basic science faculty was assembled through part-time employment of teachers from the Faculties of Medicine, Pharmacy, and Science of the University of Saigon. Classes were started with 36 students in the first year.

It was characteristic of Dr. Tam that what he did he did with vigor. He became not only Dean of the school but also a fatherfigure to the students.
