Making It New:

Decision-making for New Product Development in Small Businesses Mary Haropoulou, Clive Smallman, 2018-12-07 What goes on in a small firm that lives or dies by its capacity to innovate How are decisions made on new product development and how does that feed into the ecological social and financial sustainability of the firm This book answers the questions through an in depth look at a small business that manufactures high end carpet yarn Using advanced analytical techniques to interrogate rich qualitative data the book draws together established theories of decision making and new product development coupled with thinking about business sustainability to improve our understanding of this important area of business practice The book further reinforces the importance and role of organizational learning in organizational decision making based on novel analysis of empirically developed qualitative data

Making New Media Andrew Burn, 2009 Making New Media offers a series of case studies from the author's work with students and teachers from the mid 90s to the present day charting the dramatic rise of new media in schools Work across a wide range of media is presented computer animation digital video and film computer games and machinima The author tackles the vital contemporary themes of literacy and creativity making an innovative argument for the combination of traditions of social semiotics and cultural studies in the study of literacy and new media This volume should be read by every undergraduate and graduate student as well as any faculty member involved with or interested in any aspect of new media

Making New Zealand's Pop Renaissance Michael Scott, 2016-05-13 Since the early 2000s New Zealand has undergone a pop renaissance Domestic artists sales airplay and concert attendance have all grown dramatically while new avenues for kiwi pop exports emerged Concurrent with these trends was a new collective sentiment that embraced and celebrated domestic musicians In Making New Zealand's Pop Renaissance Michael Scott argues that this revival arose from state policies and shows how the state built market opportunities for popular musicians through public private partnerships and organizational affinity with existing music industry institutions New Zealand offers an instructive case for the ways in which after neo liberal states steer and coordinate popular culture into market exchange by incentivizing cultural production Scott highlights how these music policies were intended to address various economic and social problems Arriving with the creative industries discourse and policy making politicians claimed these expanded popular music supports would facilitate sustainable employment and a sense of national identity Yet popular music as economic and social policy presents a paradox the music industry generates commercial failure and thus requires a large unattached pool of potential talent Considering this feature Scott analyses how state programs induced an informal economy of proto pop production aimed at accessing competitive state funding while simultaneously encouraging musicians to adopt entrepreneurial subjectivities In doing so he argues New Zealand's music policies are a form of social policy that unintentionally deploy hierarchical structures to foster social inclusion amongst growing numbers of creative workers emigration from the Dominican Republic began in the early 1960s with most Dominicans settling in New York City. Since then the growth of the city's Dominican population has been staggering, now accounting for around 7 percent of the total population. How have Dominicans influenced New York City? And conversely, how has the move to New York affected their lives? In Making New York Dominican, Christian Krohn Hansen considers these questions through an exploration of Dominican immigrants' economic and political practices and through their constructions of identity and belonging. Krohn Hansen focuses especially on Dominicans in the small business sector, in particular the bodega and supermarket and taxi and black car industries. While studies of immigrant business and entrepreneurship have been predominantly quantitative, using survey data or public statistics, this work employs business ethnography to demonstrate how Dominican enterprises work, how people find economic openings, and how Dominicans who own small commercial ventures have formed political associations to promote and defend their interests. The study shows convincingly how Dominican businesses over the past three decades have made a substantial mark on New York neighborhoods and the city's political economy. Making New York Dominican is not about a Dominican enclave or a parallel sociocultural universe. It is instead about connections between Dominican New Yorkers' economic and political practices and ways of thinking and the much larger historical political, economic, and cultural field within which they operate. Throughout, Krohn Hansen underscores that it is crucial to analyze four sets of processes: the immigrants' forms of work, their everyday life, their modes of participation in political life, and their negotiation and building of identities. Making New York Dominican offers an original and significant contribution to the scholarship on immigration, the Latinization of New York, and contemporary forms of globalization.

Making New Disciples Mark Ireland, 2015-12-10. Ten years on from their first book Evangelism Which Way, now which has become a valuable and much recommended resource, Mark Ireland and Mike Booker aim to take people a step further. Making New Disciples offers a practical approach based on careful theological reflection and years of hands-on experience in local church leadership, theological education, and the national church. The book is not so much a Which guide to the available resources as a wrestling with the paradoxes of evangelism in a changing world, backed up with plenty of stories and specific examples.

Making New Music in Cold War Poland Lisa Jakelski, 2016-10-18. Making New Music in Cold War Poland presents a social analysis of new music dissemination at the Warsaw Autumn International Festival of Contemporary Music, one of the most important venues for East-West cultural contact during the Cold War. In this incisive study, Lisa Jakelski examines the festival's institutional organization, negotiations among its various actors, and its reception in Poland, while also considering the festival's worldwide ramifications, particularly the ways that it contributed to the cross-border movement of ideas, objects, and people, including composers, performers, official festival guests, and tourists. This book explores social interactions within institutional frameworks and how these interactions shaped the practices, values, and concepts associated with new music.
