Theory, Method, and Practice in Computer Content Analysis Mark D. West, 2001-04-30 In recent years computer content analysis has undergone something of a renaissance Inexpensive and powerful desktop computers mean that computer analysis of texts is available to most researchers The availability of software to do analyses however is not always linked to clear theoretical and methodological understandings This volume seeks to deal with this concern by providing from scholars in a variety of disciplines perspectives upon the theoretical and methodological issues which arise when conducting content analysis via computer Although it is not always obvious computer content analysis is a method which inevitably calls for theoretical assumptions Those theoretical assumptions in turn drive methodological considerations and method in turn determines the form of the practice of computer content analysis This volume includes ten articles by well known scholars utilizing computer content analysis A variety of methodological theoretical and practical issues are here addressed presenting unique methods and perspectives for the consideration of computer content analysis Intended for an audience of graduate students scholars and in field practitioners Theory Method and Practice of Computer Content Analysis will serve as an invaluable resource of ideas and practices for those interested in using computers to analyze textual material

Congressional Communication in the Digital Age Jocelyn Evans, Jessica M. Hayden, 2017-07-06 Communication defines political representation At the core of the representational relationship lies the interaction between principal and agent the quality of this relationship is predicated upon the accessibility of effective channels of communication between the constituent and representative Over the past decade congressional websites have become the primary way constituents communicate with their members and a prominent place for members to communicate with constituents Yet as we move toward the third decade of the 21st century little work has systematically analyzed this forum as a distinct representational space In this book Jocelyn Evans and Jessica Hayden offer a fresh timely and mixed methods approach for understanding how the emergence of virtual offices has changed the representational relationship between constituents and members of Congress Utilizing strong theoretical foundations a broad historical perspective elite interviews and rich original datasets Evans and Hayden present evidence that virtual offices operate as a distinct representational space and they demonstrate that their use has resulted in unprecedented and ill understood changes in representational behavior Congressional Communication in the Digital Age contributes to the scholarship on representation theory and its application to the contemporary Congress It is valuable reading for students and researchers interested in American politics political communication and legislative politics

Transportation,2001 Digital Media and Textuality Daniela Côrtes Maduro,2017-12-15 Due to computers ability to combine different semiotic modes texts are no longer exclusively comprised of static images and mute words How have digital media changed the way we write and read What methods of textual and data analysis have emerged How do we rescue digital artifacts from obsolescence And how can digital media be used or taught inside classrooms These and other questions are addressed in this volume that assembles contributions by artists writers scholars and editors such as Dene Grigar Sandy Baldwin Carlos Reis and Frieder Nake They offer a multiperspectival view on the way digital media have changed our notion of textuality Effects on U.S. Timber Outlook of Recent Economic Recession, Collapse in Housing Construction, and Wood Energy Trends Peter J. Ince,2012 This paper reviews recent trends and structural changes in U S forest product markets and projects their effects on the long range U S timber market outlook The analysis derives from the same U S and global economic model that produced 50 year projections for the 2010 RPA nationwide forest assessment but analysis is revised to more accurately include the economic recession of 2007 2009 the collapse in U S housing construction since 2005 and expected growth in wood energy consumption The analysis uses the 2012 USDA Baseline global macroeconomic and currency exchange rate outlook along with a revised U S housing projection Results provide a coherent 2012 baseline outlook to 2060 that takes into account recent market trends and includes a rebound in U S timber harvest and higher net exports but only modest expansion in timber harvest over the long run resulting in only modest increases in real timber stumpage prices and expanding U S timber growing stock inventories
