Rehabilitating Government Pay Employment Reform In Africa World Bank Ser:

A Decade of Civil Service Reform in Sub-Saharan Africa Mr. Ian Lienert, Jitendra R. Modi, 1997-12-01 This paper assesses a decade of experience in civil service reform in a sample of 32 sub-Saharan African countries. Many countries have made an important start towards reducing excessive staffing levels and the nominal wage bill but less progress has been made in decompressing salary differentials in favor of higher grade staff. In the CFA franc zone countries real wages fell sharply after the 1994 devaluation but the wage bill relative to tax revenue is still high in many countries. There is a need to consolidate quantitative first generation reforms that contribute to macroeconomic stabilization. Equally important is the need to make progress on qualitative second generation reforms especially remuneration and promotion policies that reward performance and measures to improve civil service management. Such policies will require strong political commitment by governments.

Rehabilitating Government David L. Lindauer, Barbara Nunberg, 1994-01-01 Analyzes the issues affecting income security for the elderly in both developing and industrial nations. Systems providing financial security for the old are under increasing strain throughout the world. Changing demographics have led to an increased proportion of old people in the general population. Traditional means of support for the old such as extended families are weakening. Meanwhile formal systems such as government backed pensions have proven unstable. For these reasons economists, policymakers and government officials are exploring ways to address such issues as how to ensure financial security for the old and the best ways of paying for such security. The roles of the public and private sectors when systems are used to enhance rather than detract from economic growth. This study the first comprehensive and global examination of old age security addresses such issues. It identifies three functions of old age financial security programs: redistribution, saving and insurance. It evaluates the policy options for meeting these functions using two criteria: their impact on the aged and their impact on the economy as a whole. The study suggests that financial security for the old and economic growth would be better served if governments relied on three systems: 1. A publicly managed system with mandatory participation and the limited goal of reducing poverty among the old; 2. A privately managed mandatory savings system; 3. A voluntary savings system. These three systems would ensure against the many risks of old age. The study concludes that a combination of different income security policies is more effective than any single approach and that all countries should begin planning for their aging populations now.

Democratic Reform in Africa Emmanuel Gyimah-Boadi, 2004 After more than a decade of reform efforts in Africa much of the optimism over the continent's prospects has been replaced by widespread Afropessimism But to what extent is either view well founded Democratic Reform in Africa plumbs the key issues in the contemporary African experience including intrastate conflict corruption and the development of civil society highlighting the challenges and evaluating the progress of political and economic change Case studies of Botswana Mozambique Nigeria and South Africa complement the thematic chapters exploring the interactions between democracy and development

African Economies and the Politics of Permanent Crisis, 1979-1999 Nicolas Van de Walle, 2001-09-24 This Book explains why African countries have remained mired in a disastrous economic crisis since the late 1970s It shows that dynamics internal to African state structures largely explain this failure to overcome economic difficulties rather than external pressures on these same structures as is often argued Far from being prevented from undertaking reforms by societal interest and pressure groups clientelism within the state elite ideological factors and low state capacity have resulted in some limited reform but much prevarication and manipulation of the reform process by governments which do not really believe that reform will be effective Devolution and Development Mwangi S. Kimenyi, 2018-01-18 Through a collection of unique case studies and theoretical analyses this work examines the genesis and impact of decentralization reforms in developing and transition countries In particular the volume shows how decentralization affects governance and efficiency in the provision of public goods and under what conditions decentralization seems to deliver its theoretical benefits Analyses in the book address current concerns about the interaction of decentralization with social and political structure resource mobilization public goods provision and corruption This work will be invaluable to scholars of politics development studies and regional studies
