Food Protein Chemistry Zeynep Ustunol, 2014-12-19 Food proteins are of great interest not only because of their nutritional importance and their functionality in foods but also for their detrimental effects. Although proteins from milk, meats, including fish and poultry, eggs, cereals, legumes, and oilseeds have been the traditional sources of protein in the human diet, potentially any proteins from a biological source could serve as a food protein. The primary role of protein in the diet is to provide the building materials for the synthesis of muscle and other tissues, and they play a critical role in many biological processes. They are also responsible for food texture, color, and flavor. Today, food proteins are extracted, modified, and incorporated into processed foods to impart specific functional properties. They can also have adverse effects in the diet; proteins such as walnuts, pecans, almonds, and cashews, soybean, wheat, milk, egg, crustacean, and fish proteins can be powerful allergens for some people. Applied Food Protein Chemistry is an applied reference which reviews the properties of food proteins and provides in-depth information on important plant and animal proteins consumed around the world. The book is grouped into three sections: 1. overview of food proteins, 2. plant proteins, and 3. animal proteins. Each chapter discusses world production, distribution, utilization, physicochemical properties, and the functional properties of each protein, as well as its food applications. The authors for each of the chapters are carefully selected experts in the field. This book will be a valuable reference tool for those who work on food proteins. It will also be an important text on applied food protein chemistry for upper-level students and graduate students of food science programs.

Natural Flavours, Fragrances, and Perfumes

Sreeraj Gopi, Nimisha Pulikkal Sukumaran, Joby Jacob, Sabu Thomas, 2023-02-14 Natural Flavours, Fragrances, and Perfumes. Explore this one-stop resource on every relevant aspect of natural flavors and fragrances. The use of sensory science has the potential to give scientists, researchers, and industry specialists a way to overcome the challenges in nutraceuticals and more generally in the functional food industry. Flavor and fragrance have the potential to significantly influence consumer satisfaction with products and its success in the marketplace. In order to effectively produce and optimize a customer's experience in both food and household products, it is essential to have a strong understanding of the fundamentals of chemistry and physicochemical processes. Natural Flavours, Fragrances, and Perfumes offers a comprehensive look at the sensory sciences necessary to produce the most appealing olfactory responses derived from natural resources for consumers. From the analysis and biomolecular aspects of natural products to the processing and isolation of desired products from the perceptual properties to regulatory aspects, specifically, the book presents novel approaches to the processes involved in producing plant-derived functional products by examining how characteristic flavors arise due to complex interactions between hundreds of molecules, as well as studying the physiological variables that affect flavor perception. Natural Flavours, Fragrances, and Perfumes readers will also find insights into the identification and characterization of plant volatiles, as well as chromatography techniques for sensory fingerprints.
