Becoming Muslim in Imperial Russia Agnès Nilüfer Kefeli, 2014-12-18 In the nineteenth century the Russian Empire's Middle Volga region today's Tatarstan was the site of a prolonged struggle between Russian Orthodoxy and Islam each of which sought to solidify its influence among the frontier's mix of Turkic Finno-Ugric and Slavic peoples The immediate catalyst of the events that Agnes Nilufer Kefeli chronicles in Becoming Muslim in Imperial Russia was the collective turn to Islam by many of the region's Krashens the Muslim and animist Tatars who converted to Russian Orthodoxy between the sixteenth and eighteenth centuries The traditional view holds that the apostates had really been Muslim all along or that their conversions had been forced by the state or undertaken voluntarily as a matter of convenience In Kefeli's view this argument vastly oversimplifies the complexity of a region where many participated in the religious cultures of both Islam and Orthodox Christianity and where a vibrant Krashen community has survived to the present By analyzing Russian Eurasian and Central Asian ethnographic administrative literary and missionary sources Kefeli shows how traditional education with Sufi mystical components helped to Islamize Finno-Ugric and Turkic peoples in the Kama Volga countryside and set the stage for the development of modernist Islam in Russia Of particular interest is Kefeli's emphasis on the role that Tatar women both Krashen and Muslim played as holders and transmitters of Sufi knowledge Today she notes intellectuals and mullahs in Tatarstan seek to revive both Sufi and modernist traditions to counteract new expressions of Islam and promote a purely Tatar Islam aware of its specificity in a post-Christian and secular environment communal existence outside the homeland Religion and the Domestication of Dissent Russell T. McCutcheon, 2025-06-27

In its first edition Religion and the Domestication of Dissent focused on the representations of Islam that circulated in the wake of the 9 11 attacks representations that scholars pundits and politicians alike used either to essentialize and demonize it or instead to isolate specific aspects as apolitical and thus tolerable faith This little book s larger thesis therefore argued for how the classifications that we routinely use to identify and thereby negotiate our social worlds notably such categories as religion or faith are explicitly political This new edition which updates the first and adds a new closing chapter continues to be relevant today a time when assertions concerning supposedly authentic and homogenous identities whether shared by us or them continue to animate a variety of public debates where the stakes remain high Thinking back on how Islam was often portrayed in scholarship and popular media in western Europe and North America offers lessons for how debates today unfold on such topics as Christian nationalism a designation now prominent among pundits intent on identifying the proper and improper ways in which religion intersects with modern political life But it is this very distinction between religion and politics that ought to be attracting our attention if we are interested not in which way of being religious is right or reasonable but instead in determining why some social groups are known as religious in the first place Seeing the latter question as linked to studying how socially formative categories function in liberal democracies Religion and the Domestication of Dissent offers an anthropology of the present when the longstanding mechanisms of liberal governance seem to be under threat

Good Taste, Bad Taste, & Christian Taste Frank Burch Brown, 2003 Christians frequently come into conflict with themselves and others over such matters as music popular culture and worship style Yet they usually lack any theology of art or taste adequate to deal with aesthetic disputes In this provocative book Frank Burch Brown offers a constructive ecumenical approach to artistic taste and aesthetic judgment a non elitist but discriminating theological aesthetics that has teeth but no fangs While grounded in history and theory this book takes up such practical questions as How can one religious community accommodate a variety of artistic tastes What good or harm can be done by importing music that is worldly in origin into a house of worship How can the exercise of taste in the making of art be a viable and sometimes advanced spiritual discipline In exploring the complex relation between taste religious imagination and faith Brown offers a new perspective on what it means to be spiritual religious and indeed Christian
