1. Introspection Method:

This method was introduced by EB Titchener. This is also known as self-observation method. Introspection means 'to look within'.

It is not possible to understand the inner feelings and experiences of other persons. But the individual himself can observe and report.

Example: A patient can report about his pains and other disturbances in a better way than by a nurse. He will look within himself and explain how he is feeling. This will help for a better treatment. Though Introspection is a useful method, it has some demerits also.

These are:

(a) We cannot verify the reports given by the observer hence we have to accept his report. At times even if he is reporting correctly there may be distortions

(b) This method cannot be used to study children, animals and persons suffering from mental disorders. But this is a cheap and easy method.

Longino, 2013-01-18 In Studying Human Behavior Helen E Longino enters into the complexities of human behavioral research a domain still dominated by the age old debate of nature versus nurture Rather than supporting one side or another or attempting to replace that dichotomy with a different framework for understanding behavior Longino focuses on how scientists study it specifically sexual behavior and aggression and asks what can be known about human behavior through empirical investigation She dissects five approaches to the study of behavior quantitative behavioral genetics molecular behavior genetics developmental psychology neurophysiology and anatomy and social environmental methods highlighting the underlying assumptions of these disciplines as well as the different questions and mechanisms each addresses She also analyzes efforts to integrate different approaches Longino concludes that there is no single correct approach but that each contributes to our overall understanding of human behavior

In addition Longino reflects on the reception and transmission of this behavioral research in scientific social clinical and political spheres A highly significant and innovative study that bears on crucial scientific questions Studying Human Behavior will be essential reading not only for scientists and philosophers but also for science journalists and anyone interested in the engrossing challenges of understanding human behavior

The Psychology of Religious Adjustment Edmund Smith Conklin,1929 I have written this book with the profound conviction that it is profitable to keep the field of psychology distinct from theology and the philosophy of religion While I am not ignorant of theology and the philosophy of religion I have studiously sought to keep such knowledge as I have of those subjects entirely in the background The book is written as a study of certain forms of human behavior and for me a study of behavior must include the conscious accompaniments It should not however be looked upon as anything more than a study of behavior There is in it no intentional brief for any form of religious faith nor for any form of anti religious doctrine There is no reason of course why the material here presented should not be utilized by theologians and philosophers of religion for its larger significances if they find anything which seems of possible service to them But my aim has been the more humble one of seeking merely to bring together facts and psychological interpretations of religious conduct and to consider them in the light of contemporary psychological thought I am confident that this procedure has greatly clarified my own thinking on these subjects I hope it may do as much for others Preface PsycINFO Database Record c 2010 APA all rights reserved
