Forthcoming Books Rose Army,1993 Miracle in Korea Glenn C. Cowart,1992 Most recent work on the nature of experiment in physics has focused on big science the large scale research addressed in Andrew Pickering s Constructing Quarks and Peter Galison s How Experiments End This book examines small scale experiment in physics in particular the relation between theory and practice The contributors focus on interactions among the people materials and ideas involved in experiments factors that have been relatively neglected in science studies The first half of the book is primarily philosophical with contributions from Andrew Pickering Peter Galison Hans Radder Brian Baigrie and Yves Gingras Among the issues they address are the resources deployed by theoreticians and experimenters the boundaries that constrain theory and practice the limits of objectivity the reproducibility of results and the intentions of researchers The second half is devoted to historical case studies in the practice of physics from the early nineteenth to the early twentieth century These chapters address failed as well as successful experimental work ranging from Victorian astronomy through Hertz s investigation of cathode rays to Trouton s attempt to harness the ether Contributors to this section are Jed Z Buchwald Giora Hon Margaret Morrison Simon Schaffer and Andrew Warwick With a lucid introduction by Ian Hacking and original articles by noted scholars in the history and philosophy of science this book is poised to become a significant source on the nature of small scale experiment in physics Staff Operations Richard Winship Stewart,1991 Ship of Miracles Bill Gilbert,2000 In December 1950 the skeleton crew of the merchant ship The Meredith Victory rescued 14 000 Korean refugees from the hands of the rapidly approaching Chinese army in the city of Hungnam Here is the incredible story of how the little vessel pulled off what s been called the greatest rescue operation in history by a single ship Archival photos MacArthur's X Corps in Korea Edward L. Daily,1999 The actual objective of this book is to provide tho the American public the brief existence and history of the X Corps during the early stages of the Korean War The title part of the book Inchon to the Yalu is significant to the very important amphibious operations made by the 1st Marine Division and the 7th Infantry Division In later operations the 3rd Infantry Division would become part of the X Corps Special Report on Chosin Reservoir 27 Nov to 10 Dec 1950 Headquarters X CORPS Command,2013-08-10 The United Nations counter offensive against the North Korean Army was launched in the middle of September 1950 with the X US Corps executing a successful amphibious envelopment at INCHON In conjunction with the INCHON landing the Eighth Army attacked north from the PUSAN perimeter and after making a juncture with X Corps at the INCHON SEOUL beachhead continued the exploitation north toward the YALU River During October Eighth Army continued north to capture the North Korean Capital at PYONGYANG while the I Republic of Korea Corps made a rapid advance along the East Coast of Korea Meanwhile X Corps mounted a second amphibious envelopment this time against the Northeast Korean Coast The capture of WONSAN and HUNGNAM important east coast ports by I Republic of Korea Corps obviated assault landings by X Corps and Commanding General X Corp assumed command of all

United Nations Forces in the Northeast Zone of Korea on 20 October 1950 Following the debarkation of X Corps elements beginning 26 October the 1st Marine Division and 7th Infantry Division entered the exploitation phase against disintegrating North Korean resistance The original mission of X Corps to drive west after landing to assist Eighth Army in the capture of PYONGYANG had been changed to an offensive to the North with the objective of reaching the Manchurian and USSR Borders as soon as possible The sectors of advance were the 1st Marine Division on the West 7th Infantry Division in the center and I Republic of Korea Corps on the East By the end of the third week of November the completion of this mission was in sight The 1st Marine Division had conducted vigorous anti guerrilla operations in the WONSAN HAMHUNG area and had defeated elements of the 124th and 126th Chinese Communist Forces Divisions north of HAMHUNG After this battle the 7th Marine Regiment had advanced north reaching the southern tip of CHOSIN Reservoir on 14 November On 6 November the 3d US Infantry Division which was joining X Corps from Japan initiated relief of 1st Marine Division elements in the WONSAN area This released the bulk of the 1st Marine Division for its drive to the border On 21 November the 7th Infantry Division reached the YALU River this was the only Unit in X Corps to reach the border while I Republic of Korea Corps advancing Northeast completed the capture of the port of CHONGJIN on 25 November against the only organized resistance in the Corps zone Civil Affairs was making steady progress in organizing local and provincial governments United Nations Forces were enthusiastically received by the majority of the population In order to protect these governments it was necessary to employ a substantial number of troops Likewise the Military Supply Route s railroads and military installations required security against the depredations of many bands of by passed North Korean Army troops and guerrillas These guerrilla attacks while a problem were not considered critical and it was felt that as soon as the Corps Zone was cleared of organized resistance most of the guerrilla activity would cease The presence of Chinese Communist Forces in front of the 1st Marine Division was the imponderable in the Intelligence picture On 28 October the 26th Republic of Korea Regiment made the first contact with the Chinese Communist Forces in the area north of HAMHUNG The 7th Marine Regiment relieved the 26th Republic of Korea Regiment and by 14 November succeeded in defeating this Chinese Communist Forces covering force but there were few indications of their intentions and future plans By the middle of November the plans of X Corps became dependent on the plans for Eighth Army in the West and a change in the X Corps mission was indicated This change was made necessary by the enemy buildup in front of Eighth Army and the halting by enemy action of the first attempt in the second week of November to advance Eighth Army to the border

Focused on the X corps campaign on both coasts of Korea and its impact on the war Great Expectations U. S. Military, Department of Defense (DoD), U. S. Government, 2017-03-31 The U S Army X Corps as an organization presents a rich case study in large unit operations It fought under General Douglas A MacArthur s direct command in 1950 as one of two independent major subordinate commands leading joint and multinational forces without the supervision of an intermediate army headquarters In less than four weeks MacArthur transformed a small planning team into an operational corps headquarters responsible for the successful amphibious assault at Inchon and the liberation of Seoul However just two months later the combat hardened corps narrowly escaped complete destruction by twelve Chinese Communist divisions as it withdrew from the Chosin Reservoir in northeast Korea This monograph examines the corps organizational structure operations process and command environment using contemporary doctrine to discern the factors that affected its ability to expand the Inchon beachhead to secure Seoul prepare for offensive actions in northeast Korea and attack north to the Yalu River Ultimately no single consideration fully explains the corps fate in late 1950 Instead this monograph finds that the X Corps lacked sufficient time to build cohesive teams before commencing operations in Korea neglected to consistently plan ahead provide administrative support or coordinate the actions of its assigned units and proved unable to engender a command environment that fostered teamwork Together these factors largely affected the corps between its success at Inchon and the withdrawal from the Chosin Reservoir The X Corps as an organization presents a rich case study in large unit operations It fought under MacArthur s direct command in 1950 as one of two independent major subordinate commands the other Walker s Eighth Army As a separate organization the X Corps directed joint and multinational forces in offensive and defensive operations without the supervision of an intermediate army headquarters Originally the planning team for Operation CHROMITE in less than four weeks MacArthur transformed this core nucleus of planners into an operational corps headquarters responsible for the invasion and the establishment of the Inchon beachhead This task alone would challenge even the most experienced and cohesive corps headquarters and undoubtedly represented a palpable historical triumph for Almond and his fledgling organization More poignantly Inchon marked the beginning of a dynamic operational period on the Korean peninsula Indeed the Corps actions in the ensuing months would span the spectrum of operations test the limits and endurance of American military personnel and coalition partners and underscore the advantages challenges and timeless lessons of large unit operations It is appropriate to ask therefore what factors affected the X Corps ability to conduct operations in Korea between the success at Inchon and the withdrawal from the Chosin Reservoir
