Garden Suburbs of Tomorrow? Martin Crookston, 2013-12-04 Named one of the Top 10 books about council housing the Guardian online Faced with acute housing shortages the idea of new garden cities and suburbs is on the UK planning agenda once again but what of the garden suburbs that already exist Over the first six decades of the twentieth century councils across Britain created a new and optimistic form of housing the cottage estates of corporation suburbia By the early 1960s these estates provided homes with gardens for some 3 million mainly working class households It was a mammoth achievement But because of what then happened to council housing over the later years of the century this is not very often appreciated In Garden Suburbs of Tomorrow Martin Crookston suggests that making the most of the assets which this housing offers is a positive story it can be positive for housing policy for councils and their place making endeavours and for the residents of the estates This is especially important when all housing market and development options are so constrained and likely to remain so for the next decade or more Following an examination of what the estates of corporation suburbia are and what they are like there follow chapters on specific examples from different parts of the country on how they are affected by the workings of the housing market and then not unconnectedly on how attitudes to this socially built stock have evolved Then the final chapters try to draw out the potentials and to suggest what

The Transparent Eye Eugene Chen Eoyang, 1993-02-01 In this remarkably stimulating and erudite series of essays Eugene Chen Eoyang explores many of the underlying paradigms and presumptions in world literature highlighting issues of cultural interchange and cultural hegemony Translation is seen in this perspective as a central rather than a peripheral factor in understanding the meanings of literary works Taking concrete examples from Chinese literature Eoyang illuminates not only the semantic collisions that underlie the complexities of translation but also the cultural identities reflected in language and values The title alludes to a passage from Emerson reminding us that the object on view is not only the vision we see but is also the organ through which that vision is apprehended The confrontation with a radical other which is for many Westerners what Chinese literature represents is thus both a discovery and a self discovery Part of the book's originality is that it identifies a new audience one that is incipiently bicultural or knowledgeable about what has been called East as well as what has been called West Readers with an interest in the theory and practice of translation will find this an inspiring and indispensable work one that prepares the way for a comparative poetics that recognizes the intense subjectivities in every culture and at the same time establishes a basis for a comparison that tries to transcend even as it acknowledges provincialities
