Scientific Culture and Urbanisation in Industrialising Britain Ian Inkster,1997 Ian Inkster's intent in these studies is to move beyond the high culture and expertise of science towards the construction of the culture of urban communities. The work draws on a mass of detailed research and focuses on Britain's social and cultural advantages over other industrialising nations in the years prior to the Great Exhibition of 1851, an advantage which was not created by any single decision nor by any explicit investment effect. Out of urban culture emerged a public sphere and an information system within which class divisions were abrogated at the same time the relations between information and technique became complex and decidedly non-linear. So was created a social asset drawn upon by business interests, technicians, tinkerers and inventors throughout the period and for some considerable time beyond it. Industrial Britain was made from diverse materials amongst which were those fabricated in the course of cultural dissent and social ambition. Metropolis and Province, Science in British Culture, 1780-1850 Ian Inkster, Jack Morrell, 1983. This collection thoroughly investigates the social and cultural impact of science in England during the Industrial Revolution. Each case study focuses on science in a local context, whether in the city or countryside, and examines the relationship between metropolitan and provincial science and savants.
