Compressed Development D. Hugh Whittaker, Timothy Sturgeon, Toshie Okita, Tianbiao Zhu, 2020-09-15 This book proposes a new way to approach comparative international development by focusing on time and timing in economic and social development The UK industrialized over two centuries and then started to de industrialize in the late 1960s Today the most rapid developers experience aspects of industrialization and de industrialization simultaneously It is no longer clear that industrialization offers the path of growth it once did industrialization has become thin Demographic and social challenges that earlier developers faced sequentially now come at the same time Rapid growers experience compression most acutely but the spatial and temporal fusing of past and present is widespread affecting high middle and lower income countries alike Timing refers to the differences in historical periods in which development takes place The geopolitical institutional and technological environment for countries recently integrated into the global economy has been vastly different from that of the preceding postwar decades of embedded liberalism although it does contain echoes of the first globalization and first financialization a century ago The first era of liberalism did not end well and the second is similarly foundering on the rocks of nationalism and protectionism as it is being battered by a global pandemic The authors propose an interdisciplinary conceptual framework based on co evolving state market and organization technology dyads which will help readers make sense of contemporary development across multiple societies sectors and geographies and provide a template for historical comparison

The Economics of Auditing Dan A. Simunic, 2024-12-12 The financial information provided to governments creditors investors etc by businesses has been verified by auditors since ancient times In its modern form the independent public accounting profession has its roots in 19th century Scotland A distinctive feature of this profession is that it consists of private for profit businesses operating as sole practitioners partnerships but mostly as large accounting firms The question naturally arises why should users of financial information provided by private for profit firms place trust in the verification of that information by other private for profit firms This is the interesting and complex economic issue that underlies research in what has come to be called the economics of auditing The author is one of the first researchers in this area This book traces the development of this important stream of research that applies economic analysis to the study of financial statement audits by professional public accounting firms It offers a narrative commentary along with a series of previously unpublished papers that the author presented during the 1970 s at Accounting Research workshops at the University of Chicago as part of his dissertation research that ultimately led to one of the bedrock papers in the field It provides an explanation and discussion of the economic regulatory and research environment at that time The book concludes with a discussion of important but currently unanswered questions in the field that flow from the author s thesis research but remain unresolved It will be of significant interest to advanced students and academics who are engaged in developing their own research programs as well as to any researcher who is working in the area of the economics of auditing

Sustainable Industrialization in Africa Banji Oyelaran-Oyeyinka, Padmashree Gehl Sampath, 2016-04-29 Sustainable Industrialization in Africa explores the issues that confront development policy in the context of the MDGs and the post 2015 development agenda from an African perspective The book argues that development is an ultimate outcome of sustainable equitable industrialization and that any development agenda for the future has to ensure that industrialization is fostered in a way that makes economies independent and responsive to the needs of all citizens Future challenges for sustainable industrialization in Africa based upon the differences in its current industrialization trajectories are discussed to ensure that industrial growth results in positive economic and social outcomes in the context of the post 2015 development agenda

Industries, Firms, and Jobs George Farkas, Paula England, 1988-07-31 This book is a welcome reassertion of an old tradition of interdisciplinary research That tradition has tended to atrophy in the last decade largely because of an enormous expansion of the domain of neoclassical economics The expansion has fed on two scientific developments first human capital theory second contract theory Both developments have taken phenomena critical to the operation of the economy but previously understood in terms of categories separate and distinct from those with which economists generally work and sought to apply the same analytical techniques that we use to understand other economic problems Human capital theory has applied conventional techniques to questions of labor supply It began this endeavor with the supply of trained labor and then expanded to a general theory of labor supply by broadening the analysis to the allocation of time over the individual's life the interdependencies of supply decisions within the family and finally to the formation of the family itself Similarly contract theory has moved from a theory that explains the existence of classical economic institutions to a theory of their formation and internal operation The hallmark of both of these developments is the extension and application of analytical techniques based on purposive maximization under constraints and the interaction of individual decision makers through a competitive market or its analogue

Smith, Harry M. Trebing, 2012-12-06 David B Smith This is a book about the application of economic theory to a unique form of social control public utility regulation A central theme of this work is to examine the role that economics has played in shaping the rationale and direction of regulatory practices While economic theory has played an important role in the shaping of regulatory policy in the past it has an even greater potential role to play in the future as the regulatory community grapples with the many challenges of a changing economic environment This is a very timely and much needed piece of work that can serve as a reference for decision makers who are facing the challenging problems of deregulation and competition This work is comprised of 13 selected articles that guide the reader from an initial discussion of why we decided to regulate certain industries in the first place to a specific analysis of what role economic theory has played in the electric natural gas telecommunications and water industries and whether it should be allowed to play an even more dominant role in the future The reader is then provided with a more modern version of what economists mean by the concept of natural monopoly and a menu of policy options that will allow society to derive any benefits from such a market structure Statistical Reference Index, 1988 Use of Services for Family Planning and Infertility, United States, 1982 Gerry E. Hendershot, Marjorie C. Horn, William D. Mosher, 1988 The 1982 statistics on the use of family planning and infertility services presented in this report are preliminary results from Cycle III of the National Survey of Family Growth NSFG conducted by the National Center for Health Statistics Data were collected through personal interviews with a multistage area probability sample of 7969 women aged 15-44. A detailed series of questions was asked to obtain relatively complete estimates of the extent and type of family planning services received. Statistics on family planning services are limited to women who were able to conceive 3 years before the interview date. Overall, 79% of currently married nonsterile women reported using some type of family planning service during the previous 3 years. There were no statistically significant differences between white (79%), black (75%), or Hispanic (77%) wives or between the 2 income groups. The 1982 survey questions were more comprehensive than those of earlier cycles of the survey. The annual rate of visits for family planning services in 1982 was 10.77 visits/1000 women. Teenagers had the highest annual visit rate (15.81/1000) of any age group for all sources of family planning services combined. Visit rates declined sharply with age from 14.47 at ages 15-24 to 4.79 at ages 35-44. Similar declines with age also were found in the visit rates for white and black women separately. Nevertheless, the annual visit rate for black women (13.34/1000) was significantly higher than that for white women (10.33). The highest overall visit rate was for black women 15-19 years of age (18.67/1000). Nearly 2/3 of all family planning visits were to private medical sources. Teenagers of all races had higher family planning service visit rates to clinics than to private medical sources, as did black women age 15-24. White women age 20 and older had higher visit rates to private medical services than to clinics. Never married women had higher visit rates to clinics than currently or formerly married women. Data were also collected in 1982 on use of medical services for infertility by women who had difficulty in conceiving or carrying a pregnancy to term. About 1 million ever married women had 1 or more infertility visits in the 12 months before the interview. During the 3 years before interview, about 1.9 million women had infertility visits. For all ever married women as well as for white and black women separately, infertility services were more likely to be secured from private medical sources than from clinics. The survey design, reliability of the estimates, and the terms used are explained in the technical notes.
