Sesquicentennial Papers Illinois College:

Sesquicentennial Papers, Illinois College Iver F. Yeager, 1982 Founded in 1829 Illinois College graduated its first class in 1835 when the first baccalaureate degrees were granted in the young state A century and a half of excellence in liberal education have produced a proud tradition and heritage during 1979 and 1980 the college arranged a series of convocations concerts and other special programs to commemorate that heritage and highlight its present purpose The first of the four parts of the book serves as a general introduction Donald C Munding President of the college since 1973 outlines Illinois College's academic and financial strengths during the seventies as it prepared to celebrate its sesquicentennial and to meet the needs of the eighties A chapter by Iver F Yeager editor of this volume provides a thorough account of every aspect of the Year and a half long observance Part two focuses on liberal learning as the traditional orientation of Illinois College Each of eight chapters is devoted to a major convocation or concert The opening convocation was addressed by Mark H Curtis president of the Association of American Colleges who spoke on Frontiers in Space Time Society and Education The second convocation commemorating the college's contributions to public affairs featured a dialogue between the Governor of Illinois and the Secretary of State Other programs involved the dedication of a new pipe organ and a new fine arts building both representing renewed emphasis on art and music Subsequent convocations focused on major curricular divisions science and mathematics the humanities and the social sciences A third section deals with Illinois College and the two denominations that were instrumental in founding that frontier institution Although the college is organizationally independent it has maintained a close relationship with both the United Church of Christ and the Presbyterian Church Executives from both churches led seminars on the present significance of the relationship between church and college Illinois College's distinctive heritage is the broad theme of the fourth section which includes reports of several special programs as well as a number of addresses For example a memorial program was held to honor the first two graduates of 1835 one served as governor of Illinois during the Civil War the other composed the well known tune for Flow Gently Sweet Afton Another occasion recalled the separate arrangements made initially by the founders of Illinois College for the education of women noting the eventual merger of these dual institutions An essay on the literary societies although not formally part of the sesquicentennial observance rounds out the picture of the college's tradition Appendixes list members of the various sesquicentennial committees a calendar of the major events excerpts from congratulatory messages and a catalog of honors accorded students and faculty during the period of the sesquicentennial Members and officers of the sesquicentennial class of 1979 are also listed An index of names provides ready reference for alumni and guests as well as members of the campus community who participated in the anniversary events The book is illustrated with photographs of the major campus buildings both historic and contemporary Some of the trustees faculty and students who were leaders during the celebration are also pictured The volume not only serves to record the 150th anniversary celebration of Illinois

College it also gives in sight into the major features of the ongoing life of a small college a college that not only has survived a century and a half but also has achieved significance among institutions of higher learning in the Midwest Much of the spirit of the college is captured in the Foreword to this volume by William N Clark Chairman of the Trustees Noting that there can be nothing static about courses of study offered by colleges that manage to stay in operation for a very long time he states however that some things need not change and at Illinois College they have not changed These are matters of mission of church relationship of dedication to the liberal arts and to an ongoing effort to provide a congenial atmosphere for the development of general intellectual capacities and constructive attitudes It is around these enduring ingredients that a college's character forms and traditions are built

Institutions of Higher Education Linda Sparks, 1990-01-24 This bibliography brings together in one comprehensive volume citations of books dissertations theses and ERIC microfiche relating to the history of specific institutions of higher education worldwide All types of postsecondary institutions two years colleges liberal arts colleges seminaries specialized institutions and universities are included Entries include the following elements when available author editor title place of publication publisher publication date and number of pages Citations from 85 countries are included Entries are by country dependency and territory The United States has been further divided by state Names of institutions are in English References are in the language in which they were written The majority of the citations should be available in a library somewhere in the United States Obscure sources that may be difficult to obtain have been included because they are often the only citation All editions of a title as well as older works are included because of their potential value to a researcher The book should be a part of all college university and large public library collections College of Education faculty members specializing in higher or comparative education will find much of value here

Woman from Spillertown David Thoreau Wieck, 1992 Kathryn Kish Sklar calls this work a major contribution to our historical understanding of the role of women in organizing American miners in the twentieth century Agnes Burns Wieck was a crusading labor organizer an activist known as the Mother Jones of Illinois This first book length biography is a unique portrait of her energy and unremitting dedication to social justice Wieck organized miners wives and led a movement of Illinois coalfield women She used her talents as a journalist and a public speaker to campaign for a decent standard of living for good schools and working conditions in communities free of corporate domination and for union democracy racial equality and acceptance of women in political life
