Handbook on Fisheries and Aquaculture Technology NIIR Board of Consultants & Engineers, 2003-01-01. The fishery sector is important from an Indian economy viewpoint as it contributes a source of income to a number of fishermen and has huge export potential. The systems and technology used in aquaculture have developed rapidly in the last fifty years. They vary from very simple facilities like family ponds for domestic consumption in tropical countries to high technology systems like intensive closed systems for export production. Much of the technology used in aquaculture is relatively simple, often based on small modifications that improve the growth and survival rates of the target species. Nowadays, the fish and fisheries industry is one of the fastest growing international commodity markets globally. Guaranteeing an adequate supply to this international market requires hundreds of thousands of fishing vessels and fish farms, as well as tens of thousands of fish processing workers, wholesalers and retailers in countries spread all over the world. The fishery sector thus generates employment and income for millions of people and is one of the major fields to venture. A wide range of aspects of fresh water aquaculture, such as selection of species of fish and shellfish, construction and preparation of various types of fish ponds, control of aquatic weeds and predators, production of seed fish and their transportation, fish nutrition and fish diseases and their control pertaining to composite fish culture, air breathing fish culture, etc. have been dealt with at length for easy adoption.
