Colour, Art and Empire Natasha Eaton,2013-10-28 Colour Art and Empire explores the entanglements of visual culture enchanted technologies waste revolution resistance and otherness The materiality of colour offers a critical and timely force field for approaching afresh debates on colonialism This book analyses the formation of colour and politics as qualitative overspill Colour can be viewed both as central and supplemental to early photography the totem alchemy tantra and mysticism From the eighteenth century Austrian Empress Maria Theresa to Rabindranath Tagore and Gandhi to 1970s Bollywood colour makes us adjust our take on the politics of the human sensorium as defamiliarising and disorienting The four chapters conjecture how European Indian and Papua New Guinean artists writers scientists activists anthropologists or their subjects sought to negotiate the highly problematic stasis of colour in the repainting of modernity Specifically the thesis of this book traces Europeans admiration and emulation of what they termed Indian colour to its gradual denigration and the emergence of a space of exception This space of exception pitted industrial colours against the colonial desire for a massive workforce whose slave like exploitation ignited riots against the production of pigments most notably indigo Feared or derided the figure of the vernacular dyer constituted a force capable of dismantling the imperial machinations of colour Colour thus wreaks havoc with Western expectations of biological determinism objectivity and eugenics Beyond the cracks of such discursive practice colour becomes a sentient and nomadic retort to be pitted against a perceived colonial hegemony The ideological reinvention of colour as a resource for independence struggles make it fundamental to multivalent genealogies of artistic and political action and their relevance to the present The Vital Science (Routledge Revivals) Peter

Morton,2014-08-01 In this title first published in 1984 Peter Morton argues that in late Victorian Britain a group of novelists and essayists quite consciously sought and found ideas in post Darwinian biology that were susceptible to imaginative transformation The period between 1860 and 1900 was a time of great confusion in biology the natural selection hypothesis was in retreat before its acute critics and no extension of evolutionary theory to human affairs was too bizarre to attract its quota of enthusiasts Writers capitalised on this prevailing uncertainty and used it to their own artistic or polemic ends A fascinating and interdisciplinary title this reissue will interest students of late Victorian literature as well as historians of biological theory between The Origin of Species and Mendel Evolution Peter J. Bowler,1989-01-01 This edition of Evolution The History of an Idea is augmented by the most recent contributions to the history and study of evolutionary theory It includes an updated bibliography that offers an unparalleled guide to further reading As in the original edition Bowler s evenhanded approach not only clarifies the history of his controversial subject but also adds significantly to our understanding of contemporary debates over it The idea of evolution continued to evolve Back cover The

Insect-Populated Mind David Spooner, 2005-08-22 In The Insect Populated Mind author David Spooner proposes a close connection between aspects of insect evolution and the human intellect By examining seemingly disparate subjects such as entomology language theory genetics astronomy literature and music Spooner proves that synthesis is indeed possible Once this fusion is achieved the human species can be seen as connected not just to the great apes but also via consciousness to metamorphic insects While considering Richard Dawkins and Susan Blackmore's expositions of memes Spooner suggests that the concept of memes remains a peripheral understanding of religion and the arts The book also presents arguments on the roots and nature of the mind in the work of Daniel Dennett and Steven Pinker
