Ward, Mark La Gory, Susan R. Sherman, 1988 The nature and consequences of aging depend on its environmental context and the literature does not treat the various environmental dimensions in an integrated fashion The authors introduce a general approach to the human ecosystem highlighting theoretical and empirical issues necessary to an understanding of person environment interaction related to aging They then investigate in detail three aspects of the environment of older persons residential and neighborhood interpersonal support networks and age related attitudes They give specific attention to the impact of the age composition of neighborhoods and interpersonal networks The authors present findings from their interview survey of 1 185 community residents aged 60 and over Major findings from the interviews include Despite objective neighborhood problems older persons express high neighborhood satisfaction This partly reflects limited residential options as well as a passive and vicarious spatial experience The environment is experienced in diverse ways however urbanism and personal competence shape the nature and outcomes of person environment interaction Older persons have relatively robust interpersonal support networks Perceived sufficiency of contact and support are more salient to morale than are more objective measures of interpersonal support Although attitudes toward other older people are generally favorable patterns of age identity reflect a detrimental view of aging There is little evidence that socialization for aging or age group solidarity make aging easier in this regard Older persons exhibit moderate age homogeneity within their interpersonal networks partly reflecting neighborhood age concentration Contrary to the apparent benefits of planned age segregated housing age homogeneity in neighborhoods and networks does not contribute to well being The authors examine three major themes in their concluding chapter age itself does not loom large in the lives of these community residents though age becomes salient under certain conditions there is diversity in the implications of the environmental context for aging in particular reflecting an environmental docility hypothesis and aging must be viewed in interactional or transactional terms older people construct the environment as a subjective entity Men's Friendships Peter M.

Nardi, 1992-02-26 As definitions of masculinity change how friendships are organized by men is also affected However interactions among and between men are not only shaped by gender This volume offers an analysis of the differences within the genders and the social forces that shape the ways in which friendship is organized Through different perspectives the contributors show that a greater variation exists within rather than between the genders They focus on the diversity in men's friendships and how men develop and maintain friendships with both men and women Chapters focus on philosophical and historical questions illustrate the strong connection between social structure and men's friendships and consider cultural

The United States and the World Andrzej Mania, Łukasz Wordliczek, 2010-01-15 The conference The United States and the World from Imitation to Challenge was meant to gather those interested in various aspects of the mutual connections between the United States and the world. It concentrated on the problem of the model of American democracy: the presidential system, American politics, American society, American culture, and the world's reflections about them from imitation to challenge. For this, there was an invitation to scholars from many research fields: political science, philosophy, law, culture studies, economy, and sociology. It was a result of our vision of American Studies as an interdisciplinary effort. And so, thanks to the rich and diverse approaches of the participants, our vision turned out to be true. The effect of the conference is reflected in the contributions that follow in this volume and in the rich interdisciplinary debate over the American impact on the world, integration in Pax Americana, and patterns of integration in other parts of the world, different and/or similar approaches to challenges to international order, and last but not least, the issue of continuity and change in politics. Here, one also needs to mention the ever-present debate on the American export of values, separation of church and state, human rights, the idea of sovereignty, the rule of separation of powers, modern federalism, democratization, approaches to Americanism, American Studies dilemmas, American exceptionalism, uniqueness in contemporary American society, and patterns in foreign policy.
