Redesigning Cities Jonathan Barnett, 2017-11-13 This book is recommended reading for planners preparing to take the AICP exam. Too often no one is happy with new development. Public officials must choose among unappealing alternatives; developers are frustrated and the public is angry. But growing political support for urban design, developers' interest in community building and successful examples of redesigned cities all over the U.S. are hopeful signs of change. The author explains how design can reshape suburban growth patterns, revitalize older cities and retrofit metropolitan areas where earlier development decisions went wrong. The author describes in detail specific techniques, materials and technologies that should be known but often aren't to planners, public officials, concerned citizens and others involved in development.

Experiencing Cities Mark Hutter, 2015-12-22 This extraordinary text for undergraduate urban students is a reflection of Mark Hutter's academic interests in urban sociology and his life-long passion for experiencing city life. His deep academic roots in the Chicago School of Sociology help inform and appreciate the variety of urban structures and processes and their effect on the everyday lives of people living in cities. This text however extends the Chicago School perspective by combining its traditions with a social psychological perspective derived from symbolic interaction and also with a macro level examination of social organization, social change, stratification and power in the urban context informed by political economy. This entirely new 3rd Edition has a global outlook on city life and a visual presentation unmatched among books in this genre.

Designing the Modern City Eric Paul Mumford, 2018-01-01 A comprehensive new survey tracing the global history of urbanism and urban design from the industrial revolution to the present. Written with an international perspective that encourages cross-cultural comparisons, leading architectural and urban historian Eric Mumford presents a comprehensive survey of urbanism and urban design since the industrial revolution. Beginning in the second half of the 19th century, technical, social and economic developments set cities and the world's population on a course of massive expansion. Mumford recounts how key figures in design responded to these changing circumstances with both practicable proposals and theoretical frameworks, ultimately creating what are now mainstream ideas about how urban environments should be designed, as well as creating the field called urbanism. He then traces the complex outcomes of approaches that emerged in European, American and Asian cities. This erudite and insightful book addresses the modernization of the traditional city, including mass transit and sanitary sewer systems, building legislation and model tenement and regional planning approaches. It also examines the urban design concepts of groups such as CIAM, International Congresses of Modern Architecture and

Team 10 and their adherents and critics including those of the Congress for the New Urbanism as well as efforts toward ecological urbanism Highlighting built as well as unbuilt projects Mumford offers a sweeping guide to the history of designers efforts to shape cities
