The Treaty of Paris, 1763—After eight more years, the American Revolutionary War seems to us and The British Crown accomplished. The victorious Colonies had achieved their first step toward autonomy. An entirely new nation began to germinate. A new breed of people began to blossom, and a new hybrid culture was about to emerge. The birth of the "American" appears almost three million people in 13 small colonies unified to create a new standard for life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. Within four years, 1767, the people of this new fledgling republic created the greatest and most important governing document in the history of the world—the U.S. Constitution, the framework of most constitutions in the world. "The United States Constitution"

His studies of plant life, particularly those involving plants and their relationships with insects, have been published in many scientific journals. He has also written several books on the subject of plant life and its relationship to the environment. His work has been widely recognized and he has received many awards for his contributions to the field of botany.
