The background of the entire slide is a light blue geometric pattern. It features a series of perspective lines that converge towards a central point on the horizon, creating a sense of depth. On the left side, there is a faint illustration of a classical column. On the right side, there are faint illustrations of two tall, tapered structures, possibly lighthouses or towers, with lines extending from their tops towards the center. The overall effect is one of architectural precision and mathematical harmony.

Student Achievement William A. Sampson, 2002 Sampson's study of 12 poor Black families in a Chicago suburb focuses on the potential of families to do what generations of reform could not. Should appeal to anyone involved with public policy racial or social issues

Black and Brown William A. Sampson, 2004 Here author William A. Sampson examines the role of the family in the school preparation process among poor Blacks and Latinos. It is based upon the data collected during intense long term observations of 21 disadvantaged minority students and families in their homes within the same community. The data suggests that the differences in performances are to a large degree a function of differences in the specific ways in which their parents most often the mother prepares them for the educational experience. When discipline responsibility delayed gratification internal control the value of education and high self esteem are emphasized consistently in the home students tend to achieve. When the home environment is quiet structured and orderly the students do well in school. Most importantly when parents help their children with homework the students excel. This book Frames the issues of the educational improvement. Lays out the methodology. Presents the data arranged by the academic performance of the students. Presents a detailed analysis of the data and their impact upon both the debate over educational improvement and the theoretical issue of the link between race ethnicity social class and education. Offers comparisons between poor Black families and poor Latino families. Will be of interest to scholars in educational improvement public school teachers administrators policy makers and those concerned with social class and its ramifications

Educational Resilience in inner-city America Margaret C. Wang, Edmund W. Gordon, 2012-10-12 The story of life in inner city America and the education of its people is often recounted as a tragedy the ending is often predictable and usually dire highlighting deficiency failure and negative trends. As with most social problems children and youth in the inner cities are hit hardest. But this dismal view is only half of the full picture. The cities of our nation are a startling juxtaposition between the despairing and the hopeful between disorganization and restorative potential. Alongside the poverty and unemployment the street fights and drug deals are a wealth of cultural economic educational and social resources. Often ignored are the resilience and the ability for adaptation which help many who are seemingly confined by circumstance to struggle and succeed in the face of the odds. This book helps to broaden the utilization of ways to magnify the circumstances known to enhance development and education so that the burden of adversity is reduced and opportunities are advanced for all children and youth especially the children and youth of the inner cities who are in at risk circumstances. The focus is on raising consciousness about the opportunities available to foster resilience among children families and communities and synthesizing the knowledge base that is central to implementing improvements which serve to better the circumstances and educational opportunities of children and families. This volume is intended for a wide audience of readers but particularly those who are in a position to shape public policy and deliver educational and human services
