detailed account of the issues models and outcomes of research into the cognition of bilingualism The first chapter identifies the most important characteristics of this research and its historical developments before the main part of the book explores studies of four bilingual processing topics The first of these is lexico semantic representation and organization in bilinguals which deals with how words and meanings are represented and connected in the bilingual mind The second cross language priming explores the bilingual lexicon by examining how exposure to words in one language may affect word recognition in another and leads to the discovery of an asymmetry in translation priming The third topic is selective lexical access in bilinguals which examines whether bilinguals can selectively activate one language while suppressing the other while the fourth is code switching focussing on language control and language regulation mechanisms in bilinguals The book concludes with a chapter that reviews research in three areas beyond lexical processing autobiographical memory the representation and interaction of syntactic knowledge and the consequences of bilingualism The volume demonstrates the theoretical significance and real world practical implications of research into bilingual language processing and will be a valuable resource for seminars and courses from advanced undergraduate level upwards      Forms of Decrees in Equity Sir Henry

Component cognitive processes have played a critical role in the development of experimental aging research and theory in psychology as attested by articles published on this theme However in the last five to ten years there has been a substantial increase in the number of articles attempting to isolate a single factor or small subset of factors responsible for age differences in information processing This view of aging is frequently termed the complexity model of the generalized slowing model the primary assumption being that age differences in cognition are due simply to a relatively larger performance decrement on the part of older adults compared to younger adults as task complexity increases Because generalized complexity theorists have questioned the utility of using component cognitive processes as theoretical constructs the editors feel it is time to restate why component cognitive processes are critical to any thorough understanding of age differences in cognition Thus the present edited volume represents an attempt to demonstrate the utility of the process specific approach to cognitive aging Central to this effort are illustrations of how regression analyses may provide evidence for general slowing by maximizing explained variance while at the same time obscuring local sources of variance The book concentrates on age differences in word and language processing because these factors relate to reading which is a critical cognitive process used in everyday life Furthermore age differences in word and language processing illustrate the importance of taking component cognitive processes into consideration The breadth of coverage of the book attests to the wide range of cognitive processes involved in word and language processing     Laboratories Needed to Support Long-term Exploratory Research in the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency United States.
