

A man with short brown hair and a light beard, wearing a dark jacket, is sitting on a large, dark rock. He is looking off to the right with his hands held out in front of him. The background is a vast, hilly landscape with dense vegetation in shades of green, yellow, and orange, suggesting autumn. The sky is blue with some light clouds. The entire image is framed by a thin white border.

The Economist ,1887      Properties Douglas Edwards,2014-05-12 The world is populated with many different objects to which we often attribute properties we say for example that grass is green that the earth is spherical that humans are animals and that murder is wrong We also take it that these properties are things in their own right there is something in which being green or spherical or an animal or wrong consists and that certain scientific or normative projects are engaged in uncovering the essences of such properties In light of this an important question arises what kind of things should we take properties themselves to be In Properties Douglas Edwards gives an engaging accessible and up to date introduction to the many theories of properties available Edwards charts the central positions in the debate over properties including the views that properties are universals that properties are constructed from tropes and that properties are classes of objects and assesses the benefits and disadvantages of each Attempts to deny the existence of properties are also considered along with pluralist proposals which aim to accommodate the different kinds of properties that are found in various philosophical debates Properties is the ideal introduction to this topic and will be an invaluable resource for scholars and students wishing to learn more about the important roles that properties have played and continue to play in contemporary philosophy
