eighteenth century in England and it is a story that she will tell and continue today In Pages and Leaflets of North Oxfordshire author Angela Fortnum shares a well researched family history of her maternal grandfathers offering a compelling window into the life and times of her ancestors This history chronicles the Page family s shift from agricultural and labourer life to self employment and small holding and it also lists the changes in the family s religious beliefs over time Angela includes as well a discussion of the richness and diversity of the church and chapel buildings that were linked in some way to her family each of which tells a story of their own In the end the story of the Page family lives on today as Pages and Leaflets of North Oxfordshire stands as a legacy to Angela and her mother s family and the great changes they experienced over the centuries

Ecclesiastical Lordship, Seigneurial Power and the Commercialization of Milling in Medieval England

Adam Lucas,2016-04-29 This is the first detailed study of the role of the Church in the commercialization of milling in medieval England Focusing on the period from the late eleventh to the mid sixteenth centuries it examines the estate management practices of more than thirty English religious houses founded by the Benedictines Cistercians Augustinians and other minor orders with an emphasis on the role played by mills and milling in the establishment and development of a range of different sized episcopal and conventual foundations Contrary to the views espoused by a number of prominent historians of technology since the 1930s the book demonstrates that patterns of mill acquisition innovation and exploitation were shaped not only by the size wealth and distribution of a house s estates but also by environmental and demographic factors changing cultural attitudes and legal conventions prevailing and emergent technical traditions the personal relations of a house with its patrons tenants servants and neighbours and the entrepreneurial and administrative flair of bishops abbots priors and other ecclesiastical officials
