Water pollution is a growing concern for today's generation. It refers to the contamination of water bodies like rivers, oceans, lakes, etc. Water gets polluted when chemicals, plastic paint, and other harmful products are released in it. Due to the growing industrial sector and human population, conservation of water has become an aim of regulatory bodies. This book will discuss the various ways in which water is being polluted and the processes to clean and conserve it. The detailed content provided in this book will prove to be useful for environmentalists, engineers, students, researchers, and scientists. Readers will benefit from the number of concepts and theories that have been included in this book. Singh, L.J. de Kok, 2000-07-31 In the present scenario, stresses induced due to global environmental change have indeed become a focal point of researches and study programmes worldwide. Stress caused to plant life has an important consequence to both vegetation as such and all other global cycles which sustain this living earth. Unlike other already existing works, this volume elucidates the plant-pollutant relationship in a manner that defines not only the drastic effects of pollutants on plants but concomitantly highlights the hitherto less focused areas, namely phytointication, phytoremediation, and stress-tolerant bioaesthetic development, thus concentrating more on plant than pollutant. The book would help understand the magnitude of environmental stress in the coming years and may play a formative role in defining future
