National Stereotypes and Symbolism in David Lodge's Out of the Shelter Tina Hannappel, 2008-12 Seminar paper from the year 2007 in the subject English Language and Literature Studies Literature grade 2.0 University of Marburg Anglistik Amerikanistik course Transatlantic Stereotyping Views from about Both Sides of the Ocean 9 entries in the bibliography language English abstract The first time I took notice of David Lodge's novels was in this seminar While reading the novel Changing Places 1965 I liked his gift of making use of national stereotypes in a witty way that never seemed gross and made me reflect about the characters in spite of their comic effect Furthermore I particularly liked Lodge's way of working historical events into his novels When I came across the novel Out of the Shelter 1970 1984 I chose it as a topic for my term paper because I felt it was interesting to observe how a foreign author makes use of stereotypes of my own nationality The Bildungsroman Out of the Shelter belongs to the early novels written by David Lodge Lodge as a professor of Modern English literature since 1976 is a very versatile author Furthermore he published works of literary theory such as Working with Structuralism 1981 or novels e.g. The British Museum is Falling Down 1965 or the satirical two campus novel Changing Places 1965 The novel Out of the Shelter is mainly set in occupied Heidelberg West Germany where the protagonist the 16 years old Briton Timothy Young visits his sister who works for the US Army as a civilian secretary This international theme is well suited for examining how the author makes use of national stereotypes and symbolism But what must be seen as a stereotype in this novel The Collins dictionary defines a stereotype as simplistic generalizations about a group that allows others to categorize them and treat them accordingly For this novel not only the question if the characters are stereotypes is informative but also if there is made use of stereotypes in the character constellation and if Medical Bulletin of the European Command ,1959 Nuclear Science Abstracts ,1960 to advances in computational methods and the ability to model systems more precisely we can now quantify hazards simulate their effects and calculate risk with greater accuracy enabling us to manage risk much more effectively These developments are particularly relevant to environmental issues where substantial risks are involved Governments and their publics now place a high priority on effective risk management and the mitigation of possible hazards Covering topics such as Estimation of Risk Risk Management Vulnerability Geomorphologic Risk Network Systems Climate Change Risks Hazard Prevention Management and Control Security and Public Safety Transportation Safety Safe Ship Operations Early Warning Systems Food Safety Risk Perception Natural Hazards Technological Risk the book will be of interest to planners emergency managers environmentalists engineers policy makers and other government officials researchers and academics involved in the field of risk and disaster management
