CHAPTER IV PERCEPT AND CONCEPT THE IMPORT OF CONCEPTS The problem convenient to take up next in order will be that of the difference between thoughts and things Things are known to us by our senses and are called presentations by some authors to distinguish them from the ideas or representations which we may have when our senses are closed I myself have grown accustomed to the words percept and concept in treating of the contrast but concepts flow out of percepts and into them again Their they are so interlaced and our life difference Tesis on them so interchangeably and indiscriminatingly that it is often difficult to impart quickly to beginners a clear notion of_ the difference meant Sensation and thought in man are mingled but they vary independently In our quadrupedal relatives thought proper is at a minimum but we have no reason to suppose that their immediate life of feeling is either less or more copious than ours Feel ing must have been originally self sufficing and thought appears as a superadded function adapting us to a wider environment than that of which brutes take account Some parts of the stream of feeling must be more intense emphatic and exciting than others in animals as well as in ourselves but whereas lower animals simply react upon these more salient sensations by appropriate movements higher animals remember them and men react on them intellectually by using nouns adjectives and verbs to identify them when they meet them elsewhere The great difference between percepts and concepts<sup>1</sup> is that percepts are continuous and concepts are discrete Not discrete in their being for conception as an act is part of the flux of feeling but discrete from each other in their several meanings      The Problems of Philosophy Bertrand Russell,2019-07-16T16:44:31Z The Problems of Philosophy published in 1912 is an introductory book for a beginner in philosophical studies In this book the author attempts to provoke a discussion by posing different problems The book covers a wide variety of theories proposed by philosophers like Plato Descartes Hume Aristotle etc In view of these theories Russell poses questions about the nature of reality and our perception of it While the book refrains from providing absolute solutions to the problems it describes it excels in guiding the readers towards developing their own way of thinking This book is part of the Standard Ebooks project which produces free public domain ebooks      Some Problems of the Philosophy of History Guy Cromwell Field,1939      Fundamental Problems Paul Carus,2007-06-01 1891 Carus an independent philosopher who studied and published on Eastern and Western philosophy was instrumental in raising Western awareness of Buddhism at the turn of the century Carus writes in the Preface that The view here presented in spite of all our differences with Kant may be considered as the natural outcome of Kant s philosophy The view here presented unites two qualities which may appear contradictory at first sight It is radical and at the same time conservative and Our fundamental conceptions of world and life therefore for practical purposes for our individual welfare for the destiny of our nation and for that of humanity are of greatest importance On the philosophy of our age depends the health of our religious our scientific our industrial our mercantile our political and our social development See other titles by this author available from Kessinger Publishing     Problems of the History of Philosophy Teodor Ilch-Ozerman,1973
