

As a result of the under-differentiation of the vowels in the language, there are many wrong entries and the lexical distinctions such as fiŋ 'thing' and fiŋ 'swamp', and táŋ 'well' and táŋ 'stick something (e.g. a piece of meat) unto a thin object', that are found in many a dialect are completely obscured.

If the phonemic inventory is inaccurate, this is not remedied by information on pronunciations. For this reason, the reader is likely to mispronounce many of the entries with /u/ in closed syllables since many such entries are phonetically either [u] or [ɔ]. Similarly many entries with /i/ in closed syllables are likely to be mispronounced since there is no /i/ at all in her vowel inventory.

These problems would not have arisen if Kaufman had made use of the Standard Ibibio Orthography based on a ten vowel system given below and published in 1983, two years before the publication of her dictionary:

i		u
e	o
ɛ	ɔ	ɔ
	ɛ	ɔ

The third major flaw is the omission of important affixes such as those of tense and aspect, which play very important grammatical and semantic roles in the language (cf. Enslin 1983b and 1987). As most of these affixes can easily be represented segmentally, there ought to have been a section for them if they could not be treated along with other entries. Williamson (1972:297) has included Igbo affixes such as the derivative suffix -wa -v within her regular entries. For example, the future affix yáŋ could be entered as a tense prefix thus:

yáŋ indef. fut. prefix (on the yáŋ page of the dictionary).

These flaws notwithstanding, Kaufman has made a very important contribution to Ibibio studies in her Ibibio Dictionary and the Coos River State University and the African Studies Centre, Leiden, deserve high commendations for publishing it.

NOTES

1. This and entries such as Itáŋ 'thirty' (i.e. ten in three places), and Itáŋ shíŋ 'hundred' (i.e. ten in ten places), suggest some form of decimal system in Ibibio.
2. This explanation has been challenged by some native speakers.

The book under review is the first substantial publication on the Gusa language, and is therefore very welcome, all the more since data on the A.60 group of Bantu languages is so scarce. Other publications on Gusa by the same author are a Gusa-French wordlist of about 1600 items, a booklet containing four short stories in Gusa with a translation in French, and a literacy manual in Gusa, all of which were published by the SIL in Cameroon.

The phonology of Gusa is presented in the Martinet framework. Chapter two, the main chapter of the book, contains an inventory of phonemes, with a careful demonstration of their distinctiveness by the familiar French technique of establishing series of minimal pairs (pp.19-40). In addition, the chapter contains a frequency list for components, in which there are some errors. The initial sequence ak, for example, has
