

With the appearance of 'surreal' digital imagery on a daily basis in our culture, it is easy to forget the surrealist movement of the 1920s and 1930s. Photography, as the modern technology of the twentieth century, was central to the surrealists and this book is a fundamental and timely historical re-evaluation of the whole surrealist project and its uses of photography.

Sensitive to the internal dynamics of surrealism, David Bate examines the surrealist attitude to the visual across the surrealist project in chapters that offer critical readings of surrealist images from their publications and exhibitions elaborating, for example, on the surrealist flirt with Orientalism, fascination with de Sade, preoccupation with the hysteric, and engagement with colonial and anti-colonial politics, guided always by the surrealists' work across the triangle of terms sexuality, colonialism and social dissent.

Informed by notions of post-coloniality, by semiotics, psychoanalysis and photography theory, Photography and Surrealism re-reads key images in surrealism within their immediate historical context, mapping these readings across the progressive changes within surrealism itself and within the general framing dichotomy of photography and surrealism. The book is an original, clearly written critical re-evaluation of the use of photography in surrealism, which presents surrealism as a critical avant-garde project and returns surrealism to its proper historical and theoretical location.

David Bate is Course Leader in the MA in Photographic Studies and Senior Lecturer in Photography Theory, University of Westminster, London. His visual work has been shown widely in contemporary galleries and his writings published in such journals as Afterimage, Creative Camera and Third Text.

'This book is a welcome antidote to popular notions of Surrealism as apolitical 'shock art' or as phallicentric and sexually exploitative. Bate does a superlative job of showing how the Surrealists' desire to use photographs to expose what lived experience seeks to repress was mobilized as a radical weapon against the hidden violence of history.'

Photography And Surrealism Sexuality Colonialism And Social Dialect:

Colonialist Photography Eleanor M. Hight, Gary D. Sampson, 2013-06-17 Colonialist Photography is an absorbing collection of essays and photographs exploring the relationship between photography and European and American colonialism. The book is packed with well over a hundred captivating images ranging from the first experiments with photography as a documentary medium up to the decolonization of many regions after World War II. Reinforcing a broad range of Western assumptions and prejudices, Eleanor M. Hight and Gary D. Sampson argue that such images often assisted in the construction of a colonial culture. The Passionate Camera Deborah Bright, 1998 This book brings together over 50 artists, scholars and critics to address a broad range of issues in photography and sexuality. Among the issues addressed by the contributors is the use and abuse of photographs in political campaigns and direct activism. We Were Here:

Sexuality, Photography, and Cultural Difference Sunil Gupta, 2022-09-20 We Were Here: Sexuality, Photography and Cultural Difference Selected essays by Sunil Gupta. "Orientalism, Eroticism and Modern Visuality in Global Cultures" Julie Codell, 2017-07-05 In Orientalism, Eroticism and Modern Visuality in Global Cultures, scholars look afresh at representations of nineteenth-century oriental bodies, inquiring deeply into their erotic dimensions, tracing their global dissemination at cross-cultural intersections of the visual and the political. Authors consider the impact of eroticized orientalist representations registered on racial and gendered bodies at historical moments across the globe in the media of photography, painting, prints and sculpture by contextualizing the visual within social practices, ethnography, literature, travel writing and the dynamics of imperialism. Authors examine orientalism's politico-erotic import across not only imperial Britain and France but also throughout India and the Middle East, initiating cross-cultural analyses of orientalism outside of Europe. Works studied include Orientalist and homoerotic works by canonical artists such as Ingres, Géricault, Delacroix and Girodet and lesser-known artists such as sculptor Raffaele Monti and painter Elisabeth Jerichau Baumann. Contributors explore Turkish and European writings, explorer Richard Burton's self-fashioning and popular Orientalist photography in India and the Middle East. Authors draw on methods from gender studies, semiotics, material culture and psychoanalysis to explore art, national identity, homoerotic subcultures, female agency, class, sexuality and colonialism. The book is directed to interdisciplinary scholars and students in art history, literature history and postcolonial studies. Colonial Photography and Exhibitions

Anne Maxwell, 1999 de la couverture This book investigates the historical practice of producing stereotyped spectacles of colonized peoples at the great exhibitions and in colonial photography and relates it to the shaping of European and settler identities. In doing so, it singles out the homogeneous aspects of colonialism's culture as well as distinguishing its discontinuities. By comparing the images produced in Britain and France with those produced in North America, Australia, New Zealand, the Pacific, Japan and China, it proposes that differences in representations of colonized peoples between the imperial centres and the colonies were the result of different social and political agendas. By focusing on the images connected to anthropology dying race theory travel tourism and portraiture Maxwell argues that while some photographs were directed at naturalizing the precept of colonialism others were used to criticize it and to empower indigenous subjects Written from a postcolonial perspective and pursuing an interdisciplinary approach this book will be of interest to scholars students and researchers intent on knowing more about the images of racial and cultural difference that shaped our immediate past
