Black Political Thought in the Making of South African Democracy C.R.D. Halisi, 1999 a comprehensive analytical survey of the multidimensional evolution of black political thought in South Africa's politicization process. Choice Many citizens experience a sense of reluctance to share a single national identity with all of those who are defined by law to be their compatriots. This problem can be explained and surmounted but it cannot be evaded by those who aspire to build a stable democracy in South Africa. Richard L. Sklar from the Foreword. What will it mean to be a citizen in the new South Africa? This penetrating study analyzes the issues of dual citizenship, black consciousness, populism, racial proletarianization, and their interaction with various political ideologies. Halisi's analysis has practical implications for the development of political identity in the new South Africa.

Race, Class, and Power Leo Kuper, 2017-07-05. Examining in detail the apparently inexorable polarization of society in such countries as Rwanda, Algeria, and South Africa, the author questions whether current theories correctly explain the past or offer adequate guides for the future. In their place, he puts forward an alternative neo-Durkheimian view of the possibility of non-violent revolutionary change based on the development of such social and cultural continuities as already exist within each plural society. But he warns that this is an age of passionate commitment to violence in which vicarious killers abound in search of a Vietnam of their own. The aim of this groundbreaking and challenging book is to create theoretical perspectives in which to view the racial conflict of plural societies. Written in the turbulent early 1970s, the book demonstrates the inadequacy of then prevailing views such as Marxist interpretations of racial conflict as class struggle and the Fanon a priori rejection of non-violent techniques of change which Kuper holds responsible for the acceptance of what he calls the platitudes of violence. The book concludes with more personal sections focusing on the author's struggles with the then prevailing South African society, critiques of that and censorship of his attempts to make these public. In the light of subsequent changes in South Africa many decades later, this book serves not only as an important work of political sociology but as a personal testament to the fight against racism in South Africa. Leo Kuper was professor of sociology and director of the African Studies Center at the University of California Los Angeles. A South African by birth, he was one of the first writers on genocide as well as other aspects of African studies and urban sociology. His major book Genocide (Penguin, 1981) remains in print. The Leo Kuper Foundation is a non-governmental organization dedicated to the eradication of genocide through research, advice, and education. It was created in Washington, DC, in 1994 following the death of Leo Kuper with the aim of improving measures to prevent genocide. The main area of work for the past five years has been in support of the creation of an International Criminal Court. Troy Duster is director at the Institute for the History of the Production of Knowledge, New York University.

Labor and Capital in the Age of Globalization Berch Berberoglu, 2002. Ten contributions from scholars and activists discuss the political economy of the labor process in the age of global capitalism, examining how the global economy affects ordinary people in the workplace. Topics include, for example, the struggle for control at the point of production, the division of labor along racial lines in U.S. agriculture, and women and Learning in Adulthood Roberta S. Sigel, 1989 In the wake of World War II the issues of political stability in general and the survival of stable democracies in particular captured the attention of American political scientists An inevitable offshoot of this interest was the study of political behavior how it is acquired and how and why it persists In its early stages work on political socialization focused exclusively on childhood and adolescence as if the learning process ends when adulthood begins Only recently has adult socialization emerged as a legitimate field of study within political science In Political Learning in Adulthood social scientists for the first time examine the changes in political outlook and behavior that take place during the adult years providing an invaluable overview of the problems theories and methodological approaches that characterize the field of political socialization They consider which political values remain constant and which are subject to change and they explore the ways in which both ordinary and extraordinary life events affect adults political worldviews Among specific topics considered are the effects of age and aging the relation between participation in the work force and the development and expression of political views continuity and change in the wake of revolutionary social and political movements and the effects of such traumatic and life threatening situations as war and terrorist activity
