Philosophy Of Fiction In Literature:

The Philosophy of Literature Peter Lamarque, 2008-08-11 By exploring central issues in the philosophy of literature illustrated by a wide range of novels poems and plays Philosophy of Literature gets to the heart of why literature matters to us and sheds new light on the nature and interpretation of literary works Provides a comprehensive study along with original insights into the philosophy of literature Develops a unique point of view from one of the field's leading exponents Offers examples of key issues using excerpts from well known novels poems and plays from different historical periods Truth, Fiction, and Literature Peter Lamarque, Stein Haugom Olsen, 1994 This book examines the complex and varied ways in which fictions relate to the real world and offers a precise account of how imaginative works of literature can use fictional content to explore matters of universal human interest While rejecting the traditional view that literature is important for the truths that it imparts the authors also reject attempts to cut literature off altogether from real human concerns Their detailed account of fictionality mimesis and cognitive value founded on the methods of analytical philosophy restores to literature its distinctive status among cultural practices The authors also explore metaphysical and skeptical views prevalent in modern thought according to which the world itself is a kind of fiction and truth no more than a social construct They identify different conceptions of fiction in science logic epistemology and make believe and thereby challenge the idea that discourse per se is fictional and that different modes of discourse are at root indistinguishable They offer rigorous analyses of the roles of narrative imagination metaphor and making in human thought processes Both in their methods and in their conclusions Lamarque and Olsen aim to restore rigor and clarity to debates about the values of literature and to provide new philosophically sound foundations for a genuine change of direction in literary theorizing The Philosophy of Fiction in Literature Daniel Greenleaf Thompson, 1890 The Philosophy of Fiction in Literature Daniel Greenleaf Thompson, 1890

The Philosophy of Fiction in Literature; an Essay Daniel Greenleaf Thompson, 2013-09 This historic book may have numerous typos and missing text Purchasers can usually download a free scanned copy of the original book without typos from the publisher Not indexed Not illustrated 1890 edition Excerpt CHAPTER XIII ART MORALS AND SCIENCE It is indispensable to a clear comprehension of the theory of art that we keep before us the truth already fully developed in earlier pages that essentially all art is creation This is as true of what is termed reproductive or imitative art as it is of any other A work of art is a product of the constructive power of the human mind introduced as a new thing into the objective world As such it is something done in realization of an ideal In appreciating the work it is necessary for the observer to understand to some degree the ideal He must be able to see what the artist had in mind in order to judge of the resultant product If then it be well done according to an ideal apprehended by the criticising mind there is certainly aroused an aesthetic pleasure greater or less according to the degree of excellence This last may depend upon a variety of causes in all of which however the difficulty of the achievement is an important element That which the most of men cannot do elicits admiration much more that which artists generally are unable to achieve The reader will remember the remark of Arreart before quoted to the effect that the true aesthetic idea in work is that of difficulty conquered and which seems to have been conquered freely or for the sake of the conquest Wherever this appears an aesthetic emotion is produced independently of the subject matter of the work itself We say Here is a fine thing showing great power and genius It is quite true therefore that an artistic creation may give pleasure in itself because it is aesthetic irrespective of any scientific or moral value In order however to get at the bottom of the matter the question must be asked What

The Philosophy of Fiction in Literature Daniel Greenleaf Thompson,2015-07-02 Excerpt from The Philosophy of Fiction in Literature An Essay When I have finished Romola by George Eliot the first and most obvious thing to be noted upon reflection is that the book has interested me sufficiently to cause me to read it through If then encouraged by this experience and believing a novel to be a novel I take up Sir Charles Grandison I may find after reading a portion that I grow tired lay the book down and refuse to recur to it I am bored and the thought of continuing is irksome Clearly then all tales are not interesting Again I am led to the perusal of M Zola's La Terre My attention is held I am presently shocked then disgusted I throw the pamphlet into the fire and open the windows to air the room About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works Fictive Narrative Philosophy Michael Boylan,2018-10-17 What is the philosophical voice within literature Does literature have a voice of its own Can this voice really be philosophical in its own right In this book Michael Boylan argues that some literary works indeed can make their own unique claims in different areas of philosophy He calls this method fictive narrative philosophy The first part of the book presents an overview of traditional thinking about philosophy and literature across classical modern and contemporary periods It does not seek to denigrate these methods of studying literature but rather to ask more of them The second part then sets out a rigorous definition of what constitutes fictive narrative philosophy This definition outlines detailed conceptions of the methods of presentation audience engagement logical mechanics and constructional devices of fictive narrative philosophy The author brings this definition to bear on individual authors and works that can be considered prime examples of fictive narrative philosophy Finally the book sets out why and when fictive narratives might be more favorable than traditional philosophical discourse and how the concept of fictive narrative philosophy can move teaching and scholarship forward in a positive direction Fictive Narrative Philosophy presents an entirely new and unique approach in which literature can be a form of philosophy It will appeal to scholars and upper level students interested in philosophy and literature

Philosophy As Fiction Joshua Landy, 2009-05-26 Philosophy as Fiction reconstructs Proust's powerful coherent and original outlook on knowledge self deception and self fashioning In addition it explains why these ideas had to give rise to a work of art and not a philosophical treatise Parts of the philosophy serve literary ends with certain assertions forming part of the novel's intricate lace work and aspects of the aesthetics also serve philosophical ends enabling a reader to engage in an active manner with an alternative art of living

Michel Tournier, Philosophy and Fiction Colin Davis, 1988 This first full length study of the popular French novelist shows that his fiction cannot be understood simply as a literary transposition of philosophical ideas and that despite his opposition to the New Novel he shares its assumptions about the subversive role of literature Davis combines analysis of the major novels with discussions of Tournier's theory of reading his attitudes toward language and his preoccupation with the reconciliation of opposites

A Sense of the World John Gibson, Wolfgang Huemer, Luca Poggi, 2012-11-12 A team of leading contributors from both philosophical and literary backgrounds have been brought together in this impressive book to examine how works of literary fiction can be a source of knowledge Together they analyze the important trends in this current popular debate The innovative feature of this volume is that it mixes work by literary theorists and scholars with work of analytic philosophers that combined together provide a comprehensive statement of the variety of ways in which works of fiction can engage questions of worldly interest It uses the problem of cognitive value to explore literature s contribution to ethical life literature s ability to engage in social and political critique the role narrative plays in opening up possibilities of moral aesthetic experience and selfhood This remarkable volume will attract the attention of both literature and philosophy scholars with its statement of the various ways that literature and life take an interest in one another

Philosophy in Fiction Joanna Klara Teske,2008-01

The Nature of Fiction Gregory Currie,1990-10-26 This important book provides a theory about the nature of fiction and about the relation between the author the reader and the fictional text The approach is philosophical that is to say the author offers an account of key concepts such as fictional truth fictional characters and fiction itself The book argues that the concept of fiction can be explained partly in terms of communicative intentions partly in terms of a condition which excludes relations of counterfactual dependence between the world and the text This communicative model is then applied to the following problems how can something be true in the story without being explicitly stated in the text In what ways does interpreting a fictional story depend upon grasping its author s intentions Is there always a unique best interpretation of a fictional text What is the correct semantics for fictional names What is the nature of our emotional response to a fictional work In answering these questions the author explores the complex interaction between author reader and text This interaction requires the reader to construct a fictional author a character in the story whose personality beliefs and emotional states must be interpreted if the reader is to grasp the meaning of the work

Philosophy of Literature Christopher New,2002-01-04 Literature like the visual arts poses its own philosophical problems While literary theorists have discussed the nature of literature intensively analytic philosophers have usually dealt with literary problems either within the general framework of aesthetics or else in a way that is accessible only to a philosophical audience The present book is unique in that it introduces the philosophy of literature from an analytic perspective accessible to both students of literature and students of philosophy Specifically the book addresses the definition of literature the distinction between oral and written literature and the identity of literary works the nature of fiction and our emotional involvement with fictional characters the concept of imagination and its role in the apprehension of literary works theories of metaphor and postmodernist theory on the significance of the authors intentions to the interpretation of their work an examination of the relevance of truth and morality to literary appreciation Lucid and well organised and free from jargon philosophy of Literature An Introduction offers fresh approaches to traditional problems and raises new issues in the philosophy of literature

Literature and Understanding Jon Phelan,2020-10-08 Literature and Understanding investigates the cognitive gain from literature by focussing on a reader s close analysis of a literary text It examines the meaning of literature outlines the most prominent positions in the literary cognitivism debate explores the practice of close reading from a philosophical perspective provides a fresh account of what we mean by understanding and in so doing opens up a new area of research in the philosophy of literature This book provides a different reply to the challenge that we can't learn anything worthwhile from reading literary fiction It makes the innovative case that reading literary fiction as literature rather than as fiction stimulates five relevant senses of understanding The book uses examples of irony metaphor play with perspective and ambiguity to illustrate this contention Before arguing that these five senses of understanding bridge the gap between our understanding of a literary text and our understanding of the world beyond that text The book will be of great interest for researchers scholars and post graduate students in the fields of aesthetics literary theory literature in education and pedagogy
