Promoting gender equality through responsible business conduct: the role of governments, employers' and workers' organizations

Key points

- This brief aims to highlight how responsible business conduct can promote gender equality in the world of work. Achieving gender equality and women's economic empowerment requires systematic, proactive and transformative change in a range of institutions and areas of action. Women face multifold barriers and gender-based discrimination throughout the employment cycle due to inequalities, legal impediments, cultural mindsets and stereotypes. Governments, employer and business membership organizations (EBMOs) and workers' organizations, as well as enterprises have a critical role to play in helping to eliminate these discriminatory practices.
- The brief starts by providing an overview of key instruments to guide responsible business conduct and outlines the principles of equality of opportunity and treatment in ILO's main instrument in this area – the Tripartite Declaration of Principles concerning Multinational Enterprises and Social Policy (ILO MNE Declaration). It then illustrates how the guidance offered by the MNE Declaration and other international instruments can inform the actions of tripartite constituents to advance gender equality. The roles of governments and social partners are also highlighted, along with illustrative examples of action taken by each, independently and jointly through social dialogue.
- The brief concludes by providing a list of relevant resources.
- This is the first in a series of two briefs on gender equality and responsible business conduct. The second brief in the series explores what businesses can do to promote women's economic empowerment at work. This brief has been developed by ILO's Multinational Enterprises and Enterprises Engagement Unit, which leads the promotion of the ILO MNE Declaration, and has benefited from comments of the Gender, Equality, Diversity and Inclusion Branch (GEDIB) of the ILO. It was informed by desk-research.
