The Country of the Pointed Firs Sarah Orne Jewett, 2021-05-07 The narrator a Bostonian returns after a brief visit a few summers prior to the small coastal town of Dunnet Maine in order to finish writing her book Upon arriving she settles in with Almira Todd a widow in her sixties and the local apothecary and herbalist The narrator occasionally assists Mrs Todd with her frequent callers but this distracts her from her writing and she seeks a room of her own Renting an empty schoolhouse with a broad view of Dunnet Landing the narrator can apparently concentrate on her writing although she continues to spend a great deal of time with Mrs Todd befriending her hostess and her hostess's family and friends The schoolhouse becomes a place of mythic significance and for the narrator the location is a center of writerly consciousness from which she makes journeys out and to which others make journeys in aware of the force of the narrator's presence out of curiosity and out of respect for Almira Todd The annals and magazine of natural history, zoology, botany and geology, 1870

Every Pointed Star David Booth, 2010-04-23 In Every Pointed Star David Booth tells the interesting sometimes funny oddly moving story of J D a gifted football player who goofs his way through high school and expects to do the same in college But J D's questionable choices provoke a violent event with wide ranging aftershocks that force him to look deep into himself and into the lives of his parents Without recognizing what's happening he begins to develop an inkling of the depth and significance in the silent lives of others and perhaps even in himself simultaneously circumstances may be turning J D in the direction of finding his voice as a writer a rich many dimensional story J D its eighteen year old narrator is flawed yet compelling and wonderful one of the most intriguing characters I've met in a long time Joyce Engelson veteran editor of Richard Condon Norman Cousins and others beautifully written and tight in its construction Every Pointed Stars themes of muteness secrecy and fear of revelation are subtly presented Good unraveling of the plot and very nice finish Richard Marek former President and Publisher of E P Dutton There are not many true voices of eighteen year old boys in current young adult fiction but in J D David Booth has created a memorable one Full of moral confusion and self doubt forced to make critical choices without input or support from his cold and secretive parents J D stumbles toward maturity Along the way he finds for the first time friends perhaps a girl and something like a life of the mind A good read with a satisfying conclusion Jim Tolbert Full Circle Bookstore Oklahoma City the best literary sports fiction Ive read since Irwin Shaws 1955 classic The Eighty Yard Run but Every Pointed Star is far more than sports fiction It s for anyone looking for a smart creative insightful novel thats fun to read Gene Knight longtime English teacher and coach former defensive back at the University of Oklahoma Inductee into the National Wrestling Hall of Fame Foreword Clarion Reviews says 5 stars out of 5 and Moving and consistently enjoyable Every Pointed Star follows eighteen year old J D Johnson as he struggles along his particularly rocky road to young adulthood Secrets lies and self doubt are just some of the obstacles in his path and his journey to overcome them results in a memorable and rewarding read An only child J D is largely ignored by his parents His mother is selectively deaf his father purposely oblivious They are so removed and distant from him and each other that he never even receives a good night from his father who shares his room I always figured that I mustve done something to disappoint him and her too but I couldnt remember what it was J D says Maybe it was something so bad I wouldnt let myself remember it Or something that happened so long ago I couldnt remember it A loner in high school J D s only outlet is football at which he succeeds primarily through cunning deception a method carefully if unethically encouraged by his coach A scholarship leads J D to college where his penchant for deception proves an unreliable crutch both athletically and academically A violent consequence of his actions leaves him with a wired shut jaw and a great deal of time to reconsider his choices in the past and discover who he truly wants to be in the future Forced into silence he learns to listen and as his body heals his soul begins to heal along with it Mysteries are soon solved much as they are in life leading to a better understanding though not necessarily instantaneous resolution By turns as charming and exasperating as any teenager J D s narrative voice is wholly genuine drawing the reader in and propelling the story Through authentic use of language and believable actions author David Booth deftly builds J D s character into someone we feel we could both know and like despite his flaws Two new friends who are there for him when he most needs them an English professor who inspires subtly and brooks no nonsense from his students and a mysterious former college football star play roles in J D s eventual metamorphosis into a young man with the courage to face difficult truths and become who hes meant to be With a clever first page hook that grabs the readers attention Booth skillfully crafts an affecting and satisfying coming of age story filled with humor angst and hope Readers will find themselves deeply invested hoping that J D s parents will be there for him or that he chooses to do the right thing this time or that the girl has been admiring in class will turn around and smile at him. It's a rare book that achieves such full engagement of the reader and a truly exceptional storyteller who can inspire it. With Every Pointed Star, Booth does so to perfection. Readers looking for a compelling and sensitive book that can move them to both laughter and tears with equal enjoyment would be wise to choose Every Pointed Star. Very highly recommended.
