Environmental Treaties Gerry Nagtzaam, 2009 Gerry Nagtzaam contends that in recent decades neoliberal institutionalist scholarship on global environmental regimes has burgeoned as has constructivist scholarship on the key role played by norms in international politics In this innovative volume the author sets these interest and norm based approaches against each other in order to test their ability to illustrate why and how different environmental norms take hold in some regimes and not others The book explores why some global environmental treaties seek to preserve and protect some parts of nature from human utilization some seek to conserve certain parts of nature for human development whilst others allow the reckless exploitation of nature without accounting for the consequences It tracks the fate of these three underlying environmental norms preservation conservation and exploitation using case studies on whaling mining in Antarctica and tropical timber The book illustrates how international political battles to shape environmental regimes inevitably result in clashes between these competing environmental norms This unique study will prove a fascinating read for both academics and practitioners in the fields of international environmental politics and international environmental law Human Dimensions of Global

Monheim,2014-10-24 Multilateral negotiations on worldwide challenges have grown in importance with rising global interdependence Yet they have recently proven slow to address these challenges successfully This book discusses the questions which have arisen from the highly varying results of recent multilateral attempts to reach cooperation on some of the critical global challenges of our times These include the long awaited UN climate change summit in Copenhagen which ended without official agreement in 2009 Canc n one year later attaining at least moderate tangible results the first salient trade negotiations after the creation of the WTO which broke down in Seattle in 1999 and were only successfully launched in 2001 in Qatar as the Doha Development Agenda and the biosafety negotiations to address the international handling of Living Modified Organisms which first collapsed in 1999 before they reached the Cartagena Protocol in 2000 Using in depth empirical analysis the book examines the determinants of success or failure in efforts to form regimes and manage the process of multilateral negotiations The book draws on data from 62 interviews with organizers and chief climate and trade negotiators to discover what has driven delegations in their final decision on agreement finding that with negotiation management organisers hold a powerful tool in their hands to influence multilateral negotiations This comprehensive negotiation framework its comparison across regimes and the rich and first hand empirical material from decision makers make this invaluable reading for students and scholars of politics international relations global environmental governance climate change and international trade as well as organizers and delegates of multilateral negotiations This research has been awarded the German Mediation Scholarship Prize for 2014 by the Center for Mediation in Cologne Global

Environmental Change National Research Council,Policy Division,Board on Sustainable Development,Committee on Global Change Research,1999-09-14 How can we understand and rise to the environmental challenges of global change One clear answer is to understand the science of global change not solely in terms of the processes that control changes in climate and the composition of the atmosphere but in how ecosystems and human society interact with these changes In the last two decades of the twentieth century a number of such research efforts supported by computer and satellite technology have been launched Yet many opportunities for integration remain unexploited and many fundamental questions remain about the earth s capacity to support a growing human population This volume encourages a renewed commitment to understanding global change and sets a direction for research in the decade ahead Through case studies the book explores what can be learned from the lessons of the past 20 years and what are the outstanding scientific questions Highlights include Research imperatives and strategies for investigators in the areas of atmospheric chemistry climate ecosystem studies and human dimensions of global change The context of climate change including lessons to be gleaned from paleoclimatology Human
