Espionage, Security, and Intelligence in Britain, 1945-1970 Richard James Aldrich, 1998 This book takes the concept of postmemory developed in Holocaust studies and applies it for the first time to novels by contemporary British writers Focusing on war fiction Aldrich builds upon current scholarship on historical fiction and memory studies and extends the field by exploring how the use of historical research within fiction illuminates the ways in which we remember and recreate the past Using postmemory to unlock both the transgenerational aspects of the novels discussed and the development of historiographic metafiction Alden provides a ground breaking analysis of the nature and potential of contemporary historical fiction By examining the patterns and motivations behind authors translations of material from the historical record into fiction Alden also asks to what extent such writing is necessarily metafictional Ultimately this study offers an updated answer to the question that historical fiction has always posed what can fiction do with history that history cannot

Blurring Intelligence Crime Willem Bart de Lint, 2021-03-14 This book explores the conundrum that political fortune is dependent both on social order and big constitutive crime An act of outrageous harm depends on rules and protocols of crime scene discovery and forensic recovery but political authorities review events for a social agenda so that crime is designated according to the relative absence or presence of politics In investigating this problem the book introduces the concepts intelligence crime and critical forensics It also reviews as an exemplar of this phenomenon apex crime a watershed event involving government in the support of a contested political and social order and its primary opponent as the obvious offender which is then subject to a confirmation bias Chapters feature case study analysis of a selection of familiar high profile crimes in which the motives and actions of security or intelligence actors are considered as blurred or smeared depending on their interconnection in transactional political events or according to friend enemy status
