Opposition

With a government that seemed to be only offering short-term solutions to very real problems such as poverty, crime and unemployment, opposition to the 'new right' was fierce. It became clear that Britain was becoming a 'two-tier' society: those who were prospering under the free market and individual enterprise (often those in towns and cities around London which had fared well in private sector investments and opportunities brought about by the new market economies). The other tier was those who had worked in industry: miners, factory workers, and labourers. This working classes who now faced unemployment had no control over their future, contrary to the 'aspirational-go-getting' suggestions of the Conservative party. The workers, predominantly in the north of England and the midlands, and their families faced very real problems of poverty, poor quality housing and little government support. Here are some examples of opposition in the 1980's:

- Inner-city riots such as those at St. Paul's in Bristol, Toxteth in Liverpool, Moss Side in Manchester, Handsworth in Birmingham and Brixton in London during the early 1980's.
- The miners' strike of 1984-1985.
- The tightening of immigration controls (British Nationality Act 1981 & the Immigration Act 1988).
- Opposition to the placing of Cruise missiles at Greenham Common on Molesworth.
- Clause 28 of the Local Government Act which prohibited local councils from 'promoting' homosexuality.
- The Falklands war of 1982.

Watch the extracts from Billy Elliot, (Stephen Daltry, 2000, Working Title Films, UK). What issues discussed so far are evident in this film? What ideologies are evident? Who does it side with? How is this achieved? Who is being represented? How are they represented?
