Montgomery, Mark Lubell, 2018 Politics is intuitively about relationships but until recently the network perspective has not been a dominant part of the methodological paradigm that political scientists use to study politics This volume is a foundational statement about networks in the study of politics

Political Networks in Alberta: 1905-1992 Austin Mardon, 2014-08 The aim of this dissertation is to seek an understanding of political social structure in a Canadian province through the study of social relations The result is a better understanding of ties among Alberta politicians Quoted from the introduction This is the first study of political networks in Alberta during the period of 1905-1992 using the methodology of network theory A statistical analysis was performed using a compilation of a wide range of published historical data Important evidence of family linkages ethnicity religious affiliations professional and occupational networks and business linkages was discovered A model of political life is indicated and used to show the effect of these elites Suggestions are made to get better accountability and a broader representation of the general populace

The Oxford Handbook of Political Institutions R. A. W. Rhodes, Sarah A. Binder, Bert A. Rockman, 2008-06-12 The study of political institutions is among the founding pillars of political science With the rise of the new institutionalism the study of institutions has returned to its place in the sun This volume provides a comprehensive survey of where we are in the study of political institutions covering both the traditional concerns of political science with constitutions federalism and bureaucracy and more recent interest in theory and the constructed nature of institutions The Oxford Handbook of Political Institutions draws together a galaxy of distinguished contributors drawn from leading universities across the world Authoritative reviews of the literature and assessments of future research directions will help to set the research agenda for the next decade

The Struggle for Control of the Modern Corporation Robert F. Freeland, 2001 Winner of the 2005 Business History Review Newcomen Award for best book in business history The Struggle for Control of the Modern Corporation provides a fascinating historical overview of decision making and political struggle within one of America's largest and most important corporations Drawing on primary historical material Robert Freeland examines the changes in General Motors organization between the years 1924 and 1970 He takes issue with the well known argument of business historian Alfred Chandler and economist Oliver Williamson who contend that GM's multidivisional corporate structure emerged and survived because it was more efficient than alternative forms of organization This book illustrates that for most of its history GM intentionally violated the fundamental axioms of efficient organization put forth by these analysts It did so in order to create cooperation and managerial consent to corporate policies Freeland uses the GM case to re examine existing theories of corporate governance arguing that the decentralized organizational structure advocated by efficiency theorists may actually undermine cooperation and thus foster organizational decline

Joining Political Organisations Laura Morales, 2009-04-01 From political parties to environmental organisations citizens join a host of associations in order to influence policymaking and political agendas Yet why in some western democracies do citizens join political organisations much more than in others Drawing on a large number of crossnational surveys and data sets Morales shows that huge crossnational variations in political membership are not so much related to social or attitudinal differences between these countries citizens but are explained to a great extent by the structure of the political system of each nation

Policy Analysis in Taiwan Yu-Ying Kuo, 2015-04-21 The study of policy analysis in Taiwan began in the 1970s however while other countries have recognised the need for detailed examination of the theory and practice of policy analysis at different levels of government Taiwanese studies have remained limited This book brings together for the first time a team of experienced and highly respected researchers from across Taiwan with expertise in policy analysis theory and practice in specific areas of government as well as in non governmental organisations This is a well structured volume which will be highly relevant for students and academics interested in understanding and analysing politics and policy making in Taiwan Features of the ILPA series include a country specific systematic study of policy analysis systems by government and non governmental actors a history of the country s policy analysis empirical case studies and a comparative overview of alternative approaches a key reference collection for research and teaching in comparative policy analysis and policy studies

Commodifying Communism David L. Wank, 1999 Commodifying Communism is an ethnographically grounded account of the institutional organization and political consequences of China s historically unprecedented market growth Drawing upon almost two years of ethnographic fieldwork this book challenges conventional views of post communist emerging markets being tied to the retreat of the state David Wank shows how entrepreneurs running private trading companies in Xiamen City Fujian Province one of China s five special economic zones maximize profit and security through patron client networks with local state agents The book examines how processes of opportunity exchange expectations and advantage are constrained by both statist and popular institutions in market clientelism It also considers the implications of market clientelism for the dynamism of China s emerging market economy relative to Eastern European post communist economies and its political consequences for state society and center local relations
