Political Participation In Rural China Center For Chinese Studies:

Political Culture and Participation in Rural China Yang Zhong, 2013-06-17 Despite China's rapid urbanisation and industrialisation most Chinese still live in the vast countryside or have rural household registration. Although there was significant economic improvement in rural areas in the 1980s the rural economy has been stagnating or deteriorating since then and the book argues that the rural-urban income gap is giving rise to the potential for political instability throughout China. This book based on extensive original research including interview fieldwork in rural areas examines the nature of political culture and participation in rural China discussing issues such as the support or lack of it for democratic values levels of political interest the ways in which Chinese peasants interact with village and local officials subjective factors that motivate them to vote or not to vote in village elections and rural people's views on market oriented economic reforms local and national government and the Communist Party. The book argues that although hitherto peasants' riots sit-ins and demonstrations have been localised and uncoordinated they are frequent and have the potential to cause serious political crises for China's rulers. It concludes by considering the future political development of China's vast countryside.

Political Participation in Rural China John P. Burns, 1988 Education, Culture, and Identity in Twentieth-century China Glen Peterson, Ruth Hayhoe, Yongling Lu, 2001 A comprehensive collection on twentieth century educational practices in China Rural Policy Implementation in Contemporary China Anna Ahlers, 2014-01-10 At the turn of the millennium the disparities between rural and urban livelihoods underdevelopment and administrative shortcomings in the Chinese countryside were increasingly seen as posing a manifest threat to social harmony and economic and political stability. At that time the term 'three rural problems' (sannong wenti) was coined which defined the main issues of rural life that needed to be targeted by government action: agriculture (nongye), villages (nongcun) and farmers (nongmin). In turn with the launch of the 11th Five Year Plan in 2006 a pledge was made to shift the focus of developmental efforts to the long neglected countryside which is still home to half of the Chinese population. This book presents an analysis of adaptive local policy implementation in China in the context of the Building of a New Socialist Countryside (BNSC) policy framework. Based on intensive field work in four counties in Fujian Jiangxi Shaanxi and Zhejiang Provinces between 2008 and 2011 it offers detailed analyses of the form and impact of county governments' strategic agency at certain stages and within certain fields of the implementation process for example the design of local BNSC programs the steering of project funding implementation and evaluation the establishment of model villages and the management of public participation. Further this study illustrates that BNSC is far more than the empty slogan described by many observers when it was launched in 2005/2006. Instead it has already brought about considerable shifts in terms of the process and outcomes of rural policy implementation. Altogether the results of this research challenge existing paradigms by showing how against the background of contemporary approaches to rural development and recent reforms initiated by the central state local bureaucracies' strategic agency can actually push forward effective albeit not necessarily optimal policy implementation to some extent which serves the interests of central authorities local implementors and rural residents By tying into the larger debates on China's state capacity and authoritarian adaptability this book enriches our understanding of the inner workings of the Chinese political system As such it will prove invaluable to students and scholars of Chinese politics public policy and development studies more generally

Mobilizing for Development Kristen E. Looney, 2020-05-15 Mobilizing for Development tackles the question of how countries achieve rural development and offers a new way of thinking about East Asia's political economy that challenges the developmental state paradigm Through a comparison of Taiwan 1950s 1970s South Korea 1950s 1970s and China 1980s 2000s Kristen E Looney shows that different types of development outcomes improvements in agricultural production rural living standards and the village environment were realized to different degrees at different times and in different ways She argues that rural modernization campaigns defined as policies demanding high levels of mobilization to effect dramatic change played a central role in the region and that divergent development outcomes can be attributed to the interplay between campaigns and institutions The analysis departs from common portrayals of the developmental state as wholly technocratic and demonstrates that rural development was not just a byproduct of industrialization Looney's research is based on several years of fieldwork in Asia and makes a unique contribution by systematically comparing China's development experience with other countries Relevant to political science economic history rural sociology and Asian Studies the book enriches our understanding of state led development and agrarian change elections been conducted well and where have they been conducted poorly How have procedures changed over the years and have elections truly transformed how power is exercised in the countryside What methods are researchers employing to study elections and how have scholars from different disciplines contributed to our knowledge of grassroots politics in China This book carefully examines the implementation and effects of China s village township and people s congress elections both in terms of democratizing the polity and spurring other changes in state society relations The chapters in this book have been published across several issues of the Journal of Contemporary China
