answers to the question of why schools have so readily been drawn into public health policy formulations First seeing schools as a kind of miracle factory is a long standing habit of mind that discourages careful consideration of alternative public health strategies Second schools have been implicated in public health policy in strategic ways by actors often with unstated political cultural ideological and financial motivations Finally the authors call for a more sophisticated approach to public health policy in schools and suggest some criteria for judging the potential efficacy of school based interventions In short the potential effectiveness of proposed interventions needs to be assessed not only against existing historical evidence but also against the competing roles society expects schools to play and the working life realities for those charged with implementing public health policies in schools

General Accounting Office,1996      Health Services Reports ,2000      Environmentalism Unbound Robert Gottlieb,2002-08-02 A call for a broadened environmental movement that addresses issues of everyday life In Environmentalism Unbound Robert Gottlieb proposes a new strategy for social and environmental change that involves reframing and linking the movements for environmental justice and pollution prevention According to Gottlieb the environmental movement s narrow conception of environment has isolated it from vital issues of everyday life such as workplace safety healthy communities and food security that are often viewed separately as industrial community or agricultural concerns This fragmented approach prevents an awareness of how these issues are also environmental issues After tracing a history of environmental perspectives on land and resources city and countryside and work and industry Gottlieb focuses on three compelling examples of this new approach to social and environmental change The first involves a small industry dry cleaning and the debate over pollution prevention approaches the second involves a set of products janitorial cleaning supplies that may be hazardous to workers and the third explores the obstacles and opportunities presented by community or regional approaches to food supply in the face of an increasingly globalized food system      Childhood Obesity and the Role of California's Schools California. Legislature. Senate. Select Committee on Family, Child, and Youth Development,2001      Food Politics Marion Nestle,2013-05-14 We all witness in advertising and on supermarket shelves the fierce competition for our food dollars In this engrossing expos Marion Nestle goes behind the scenes to reveal how the competition really works and how it affects our health The abundance of food in the United States enough calories to meet the needs of every man woman and child twice over has a downside Our over efficient food industry must do everything possible to persuade people to eat more more food more often and in larger portions no matter what it does to waistlines or well being Like manufacturing cigarettes or building weapons making food is big business Food companies in 2000 generated nearly 900 billion in sales They have stakeholders to please shareholders to satisfy and government regulations to deal with It is nevertheless shocking to learn precisely how food companies lobby officials co opt experts and expand sales by marketing to children members of minority groups and people in developing countries We learn that the food industry plays politics as well as or better than other industries not least because so much of its activity takes place outside the public view Editor of the 1988 Surgeon General's Report on Nutrition and Health Nestle is uniquely qualified to lead us through the maze of food industry interests and influences She vividly illustrates food politics in action watered down government dietary advice schools pushing soft drinks diet supplements promoted as if they were First Amendment rights When it comes to the mass production and consumption of food strategic decisions are driven by economics not science not common sense and certainly not health No wonder most of us are thoroughly confused about what to eat to stay healthy An accessible and balanced account Food Politics will forever change the way we respond to food industry marketing practices By explaining how much the food industry influences government nutrition policies and how cleverly it links its interests to those of nutrition experts this path breaking book helps us understand more clearly than ever before what we eat and why
