Genetic Effects on Aging David E. Harrison, 1990-08-09 This volume provides background knowledge useful to those setting out to do genetic studies of aging in mammals and raises vital questions How many genes are important in mammalian aging What are the optimal methods for their study To what degree are patterns of aging and patterns of growth and development part of the same process Do patterns of development predict subsequent patterns of growth and aging Are there a few fundamental aging processes or does every biological system age The rapid rate of progress in this field required a new volume with a new approach based on the combination of classical genetics and the powerful new tools of molecular genetics Although mammalian systems are emphasized representatives of the advanced genetic studies in Drosophila and other model systems are included The purpose is to enrich and stimulate genetic studies of mammalian aging by suggesting and evaluating future possibilities Pathology of Laboratory Mice and Rats, 1985 International Classification of Rodent Tumors. The Mouse Ulrich Mohr, 2013-11-21 Regulatory authorities worldwide still depend greatly upon and require long term animal test results To improve the reliability of interpretation of such results a standardized nomenclature for the lesions observed in the tests is essential Scientists from both academia and industry in many countries have closely cooperated to arrive at a consensus on the descriptions of all the types of tumour and pre neoplastic lesions encountered in laboratory mice The series of fascicles should provide information and guidelines especially adapted for international use in practical toxicologic pathology Images showing the typical appearance of the discussed lesions and references to the most recently published papers complete the presented information Pathology of Laboratory Rats and Mice Ernest Cotchin, Francis J. C. Roe, 1967 Diseases Henry L. Foster, J. David Small, James G.
