Gastrointestinal Pathology: Classification, Diagnosis, Emerging Entities, an Issue of Surgical Pathology Clinics Jason L. Hornick, 2013-10-02. The gastrointestinal tract may be affected by a diverse spectrum of inflammatory and neoplastic disorders many of which pose problems for practicing surgical pathologists on a daily basis. Pathologists' understanding of these diseases continues to evolve rapidly. The topics in this issue of Surgical Pathology Clinics address a wide range of neoplasms and present ancillary techniques that play an increasingly important role in diagnostic pathology and include prognostic and predictive markers that have become a routine part of gastrointestinal pathology practice. These expert reviews provide surgical pathologists with critical practical updates on many of these challenging areas with an emphasis on differential diagnosis and diagnostic pitfalls. Some topics include Lymphomas of the gastrointestinal tract. Mesenchymal tumors of the gastrointestinal tract other than GIST. Barrett's esophagus. Evolving concepts in diagnosis and neoplastic progression. Immunohistochemistry in neoplastic gastrointestinal pathology. HER2 testing in adenocarcinomas of the upper gastrointestinal tract. Pediatric inflammatory gastrointestinal pathology. IgG4 related disorders of the gastrointestinal tract. The reader will be interested in cross referencing the first volume on GI pathology presented in this series. Its popularity with surgical pathologists has led to this second volume which covers different topics in GI pathology. Jason Hornick of Brigham and Women's provides his expertise to lead this issue. Diagnostic Pathology: Gastrointestinal - E-Book Joel K.

Pathology of the Gastro-Intestinal Tract B. Morson, 2012-12-06 Immunology in all its facets of immunochemistry humoral immunity cellular immunity immunodiagnosis and immunotherapy is currently the most rapidly advancing discipline of clinical and experimental oncology But as in most developing subjects it is continually beset with problems of methodology and nomenclature both of which are often intertwined Indicative of this problem are our circular definitions of antigen and antibody Another frequent problem is the use of the words specific and associated when characterizing reactions to tumors or the antigenic properties of neoplasms When applied to cancer these terms are obviously very dependent upon the methods used to demonstrate these qualities Indeed the very diverse nature and multitude of types of cancer preclude our making generalizations or categorical statements regarding tumor specificity Similar problems arise when one considers that many antigens found in malignant tumors share certain properties with embryonic or fetal tissues First these observations emphasize a lack of true tumor specificity for which reason the category of oncofetal antigens has been established Second whether or not such antigens are truly oncofetal depends upon the method of detection used and it has been found that here too specificity decreases as the antigen assay increases in sensitivity Thus whether substances can be truly oncofetal in nature still remains a matter of debate and such terms must therefore be used in an operational sense
