

Poland imposes martial law 'to avert anarchy'

By Hella Pick

Poland was locked tight under martial law last night, as the country's leader, General Jaruzelski, made a last, desperate gamble to avoid "catastrophe."

Mr Lech Walesa, the moderate leader of the independent trade union, Solidarity, was brought from Gdansk to Warsaw for talks with party officials, while hundreds of more militant union leaders were being interned throughout the country. Apparently, General Jaruzelski wants to use his emergency powers to force the moderates in the Polish Communist Party and in Solidarity to rally round the banner of national unity.

The Government spokesman, Mr Jerzy Urban, told a press conference in Warsaw that "Walesa is not arrested and not interned. He is being treated with all due respect."

But there was no independent contact with Mr Walesa last night or any firm news of his whereabouts. The East German news agency, ADN, reported him as among those interned but later asked subscribers to delete the reference to Mr Walesa. Highly-placed American sources said their best information was that he was under house arrest.

Official emphasis that all was well with Mr Walesa and that Solidarity would continue did not deter the distribution in Warsaw yesterday of leaflets originating in the militant Ursus tractor factory calling for "an immediate general strike in the whole country" in response "to the attack on the union aimed at its liquidation." The response to this will be tested as factories throughout Poland reopen this morning.

Yesterday, Poland gripped in winter cold, and bedeviled by shock, remained relatively quiet. Largely isolated from the outside world, with communications cut and borders sealed, the information that did get out suggested that there was little resistance as party militia rather than army units were used to sweep on dozens of Solidarity offices throughout the country, arresting many of the union's activists. About one thousand Poles from various political groups were interned, the Government spokesman disclosed.

General Jaruzelski went out of his way to plead for calm, and to reassure the country that "this was no military coup."

Later in the day, the Polish government spokesman also quoted Poland's primate, Cardinal Glemp, as calling on Poles to keep the peace and go to work today. The Government spokesman said that the Archbishop had been speaking at Cieszkowa, Poland's national religious shrine.

Warning that Poland is "on the edge of the abyss," the emotional terms of General Jaruzelski's pre-dawn announcement of martial law reflected his awareness that he had moved the country on to the razor's edge.

But it could also plunge the country into civil strife, causing international repercussions that made NATO countries, and presumably the Kremlin also, activate crisis management teams to monitor events.

There was, however, no sign that Warsaw Pact troops had been placed on alert, and the Kremlin's initial reaction was to concentrate on broadcasting a factual account of events in Poland.

Moscow Radio's only comment during the hours that followed the declaration of emergency in Poland was to explain that the action had been taken in response to "the anarchy facing the country" and the "extremist actions of Solidarity leaders who are trying to take over the country."

General Jaruzelski himself made his announcement in a 20 minute speech first broadcast at 8am and then repeated hourly until 8am. The speech came after troops carrying automatic rifles had taken up positions in Central Warsaw — and presumably in Poland's other principal cities. Other troops had occupied Solidarity headquarters and many of its leaders had been arrested. Mr Edward Gierek, Poland's former leader was among a group of other now discredited Communist party leaders who were also taken into custody.

Speaking with "a heavy heart and agonised bitterness,"

London protest . . . part of the Polish Embassy vigil

General Jaruzelski, leader of Poland's United Workers' Party, Prime Minister and Defence Minister, told the Polish people that he had now made himself chairman of a Military Council for National Salvation.

This body would take charge of the country during a "transition" until there was a return to "normality." However, General Jaruzelski was very careful to emphasize that normality to him in no way implied a return to the enormous practices and methods of the period before August 1980 (when Solidarity emerged as an independent union).

"The steps taken today" said General Jaruzelski, "serve to preserve the basic premises of Socialist renewal. All important reforms will be continued." He stressed his desire for economic reform; his regard for the "Church's patriotic attitude," and the need to find a "national solution" to Poland's crisis.

But the General did not omit reassurances to the Soviet Union that Poland was pledged to maintain its "political and defence alliances" and to maintain Poland as a Socialist state.

Although there is little doubt that contingency plans for a state of emergency in Poland had been prepared some weeks ago, the actual decision was probably triggered by the series of decisions taken by Solidarity leaders at their meeting in Gdansk last week. They included a call for a day of national protest next Thursday, and a call for free elections next year.

General Jaruzelski prefaced his announcement of martial law by alleging that the declarations made by extremists at Gdansk confirmed that the government's hands "stretched out towards accord were meeting with a closed fist." If the situation had been allowed to continue, it would have led "to a catastrophe, to complete chaos, to poverty and famine." There was no time to be lost. The country had to be taken under firm rule until a consensus could be worked out.

Appealing for calm, General Jaruzelski ended his speech with more assurances that he was "not striving for military dictatorship."

For the time being, however, Poland is under the control of the military, and all the principal organs of the administration and the economy have been "militarised." These include all forms of transport and communications, the media, and essential services. Workers in these sectors are subject to military orders, and are required to carry them out as if they were in a state of war.
