Abstract

Educational institutions should understand students' needs to provide a policy to help students achieve academic success. This study examines the insights and personal recommendations of purposively selected 20 college students disqualified from free higher education through a qualitative approach. It proposes a retention policy to address their needs. The research findings indicate that students were disqualified from free higher education for various reasons, including academic failures, difficulties processing subject withdrawals, balancing work and studies, and personal problems. The students' insights on the scholarship retention policy revealed their awareness and understanding of the procedure, a positive perception of its importance, recognition of the impact of personal circumstances, and the significance of responsibility and learning. They also suggest that the policy should be retained or revised and provide more clarity and consideration. By incorporating these insights and suggestions, the proposed retention policy aims to optimize retention rates, enhance student success, and ensure equitable opportunities for all recipients.

Introduction

Education plays an essential role in different countries around the globe. Institutions must see that opportunities are provided for the student's success. One of the factors that educational institutions shall provide is access to different scholarship programs. Various institutions offer these to provide opportunities for all students to achieve their goals in life. There are many types of scholarships, such as merit-based, need-based, and diversity-based scholarships (Cain et al., 2018). Merit-based scholarships are awarded based on academic achievement, while need-based scholarships are distributed based on financial need (Son-Turan, 2016). Diversity-based scholarships are designed to promote diversity in educational settings by awarding
