Rucutta Vineyards Leona Gibbs, 2009-04-24 The year is 1859 In this sequel to Point of the Circle readers are catapulted into suspense filled pages The author once again introduces you to Joaquin and Rue In Spain where family positions and title are almost a form of worship there are those who will and have done anything to keep or acquire the persona of perfection In a twist of fate old friends unite enemies are recognized and the pursuit for justice is resurrected revenge is only a touch away All manner of business is on the minds of the characters how to obtain more without giving away too much how to cheat and not get caught and if caught how to escape As greed secrets and deception prevail romance hangs in the air like grapes on the vine However as in justice revenge and business there are those who win and those who lose How much is won or lost depends on the depth that each person is willing to go Cooking in Other Women's Kitchens Rebecca Sharpless, 2010-10-11 As African American women left the plantation economy behind many entered domestic service in southern cities and towns Cooking was one of the primary jobs they performed feeding generations of white families and in the process profoundly shaping southern foodways and culture Rebecca Sharpless argues that in the face of discrimination long workdays and low wages African American cooks worked to assert measures of control over their own lives As employment opportunities expanded in the twentieth century most African American women chose to leave cooking for more lucrative and less oppressive manufacturing clerical or professional positions Through letters autobiography and oral history Sharpless evokes African American women s voices from slavery to the open economy examining their lives at work and at home

The Implacable Order of Things Jose Luis Peixoto,2009-08-11 Winner of the Jos Saramago Literary Award In an unnamed Portuguese village against a backdrop of severe rural poverty two generations of men and women struggle with love violence death and perhaps worst of all the inescapability of fate A pair of twins conjoined at the pinky a 120 year old wise man a shepherd turned cuckold by a giant and even the Devil himself make up the unforgettably oddball cast of The Implacable Order of Things As these lost souls come together and drift apart Jos Lu s Peixoto masterfully reveals the absurd heartbreaking and ultimately bewitching aspects of human nature in a literary performance that heralds the arrival of an astoundingly gifted and poetic writer

The Adapted Mind Jerome H. Barkow,Leda Cosmides,John Tooby,1992

Although researchers have long been aware that the species typical architecture of the human mind is the product of our evolutionary history it has only been in the last three decades that advances in such fields as evolutionary biology cognitive psychology and paleoanthropology have made the fact of our evolution illuminating Converging findings from a variety of disciplines are leading to the emergence of a fundamentally new view of the human mind and with it a new framework for the behavioral and social sciences First with the advent of the cognitive revolution human nature can finally be defined precisely as the set of universal species typical information processing programs that operate beneath the surface of expressed cultural variability Second this collection of cognitive programs evolved in the Pleistocene to solve the adaptive problems regularly faced by our hunter gatherer ancestors problems such as mate selection language acquisition co operation and sexual infidelity Consequently the traditional view of the mind as a general purpose computer tabula rasa or passive recipient of culture is being replaced by the view that the mind resembles an intricate network of functionally specialized computers each of which imposes contentful structure on human mental organization and culture The Adapted Mind explores this new approach evolutionary psychology and its implications for a new view of culture
