Practical Liberators Kristopher A. Teters, 2018-04-24

During the first fifteen months of the Civil War the policies and attitudes of Union officers toward emancipation in the western theater were at best inconsistent and fraught with internal strains But after Congress passed the Second Confiscation Act in 1862 army policy became mostly consistent in its support of liberating the slaves in general in spite of Union army officers' differences of opinion By 1863 and the final Emancipation Proclamation the army had transformed into the key force for instituting emancipation in the West However Kristopher Teters argues that the guiding principles behind this development in attitudes and policy were a result of military necessity and pragmatic strategies rather than an effort to enact racial equality Through extensive research in the letters and diaries of western Union officers Teters demonstrates how practical considerations drove both the attitudes and policies of Union officers regarding emancipation Officers primarily embraced emancipation and the use of black soldiers because they believed both policies would help them win the war and save the Union but their views on race actually changed very little In the end however despite its practical bent Teters argues the Union army was instrumental in bringing freedom to the slaves

Duke,1995-10-06 Since the beginning of the school reform movement in the early 1980 s various efforts have been made to improve teacher evaluation Most of the initial efforts were designed to promote greater accountability They were characterized by research based performance standards sophisticated classroom observation procedures and extensive training More recently the focus of teacher evaluation has been expanded to include provisions for professional development Supporters of this trend have argued that accountability based evaluation diminishes in value as teachers gain experience and expertise Teacher Evaluation Policy presents case studies describing how new teacher evaluation policies have been created The contributors go behind the scenes to examine the complex negotiations between politicians and special interest groups that accompany policy making They identify the public and the private agendas guiding decision makers What emerges is a vivid portrait of professionals and politicians grappling over the control of education Accounts include the formulation of teacher evaluation policy in North Carolina Louisiana Connecticut Washington State and Great Britain Oil and Gas Development and Coastal Zone Management United States.
