The Santa Barbara County Courthouse Patricia Gebhard, Kathryn Masson, 2001 The Colorful Story of a Santa Barbara Landmark The Santa Barbara County Courthouse is a widely recognized icon of the city called the e oeCalifornia Riviera e and just as widely known as a historic architectural achievement Thousands if not millions visit it each yeare jurists and tourists alikee but although everyone appreciates its beauty few really know how it came to be Surprisingly in the three quarters of a century that the building has graced its grounds no one has undertaken to document this architectural masterpiece Authors Patricia Gebhard and Kathryn Masson have changed that once and for all with their book The Santa Barbara County Courthouse Together with photographer James Chen and book designer Eric Larson they have created a work that is not only historically important but nearly as beautiful as the courthouse itself Many people know or assume that Santa Barbara had a courthouse before the present building was erected in 1929 but almost no one knows anything about it Gebhard and Masson begin there with historic photos of the original classical style courthouse and its Queen Anne hall of records add on In 1919 the county needing more room held a design competition for a new courthouse and the entries received as Gebhard and Masson show us were heavily inA3 4uenced by the Spanish baroque style that was popularized by the 1915 Panama California Exhibition in San Diego None of these designs was built however because the county was unable to raise money to pay for construction It wasne TM t until 1925 when the old courthouse was destroyed by the earthquake that leveled much of Santa Barbara that a new building became imperative and funds were Aznally secured Construction began in 1926 with the result we see today The footprint of the old building is reflected in the contours of the sunken gardens behind the present courthouse To document their story Gebhard and Masson spent months poring over County Supervisorse TM minutes news reports in the Santa Barbara Morning Press and articles in architectural magazines and courthouse docentse TM records They were able to identify nearly all of the architects craftsmen and artists who designed the building and created the exquisite tile ironwork furniture murals and landscaping that grace it inside and out Many of these individuals and companies are long gone of course but many are still active and as the authors point out some of the courthousee TM s Azttings can still be ordered from their catalogs Chene TM s 75 full color photographs beautifully capture the courthousee TM s ambiance and Larstone TM s open and asymmetrical book design reA3 4ects the buildinge TM s balance between void space and intricate detail They combine with Gebhard and Massone TM s careful research to produce a deAznitive study and appreciation of the Santa Barbara County Courthouse one that can hope to stand as long as the building itself
